FIRST COAL CARGO ARRIVES

THE STEAMER JESKA ARRIVED IN PORT FROM OSWEGO.

Vessel Had Trying Time as a Result of Ice Conditions—Marine Notes Gathered Around Harbor.

The honor of bringing the first cargo of coal to Kingston this season, goes to the steamer Jeska. The Jeska arrived in port on Thursday night, with a cargo of hard coal for the Sowards Company. The Jeska carries 350 tons.

The vessel had quite a trying time with the ice, but on her way back to Oswego and on her way back. The harbor is filled with ice again, and old mariners state that it is many years since they experienced such conditions as are being met with this spring.

The steamers Key Bell and Key West cleared for Port Colborne on Thursday afternoon.

Capt. La Vair has arrived to take command of the barge Hamilton.

The steamer Seguin has cleared for Toronto.

The steamer Wolfe Islander is still laid up, undergoing repairs to her boiler. Some of the islanders made a trip over to the city in motor boats.

Theatrical

At the Grand.

Love will find a way. This is an old saying and it is the key to "The Right to Happiness," a strong picture which is being presented at the Grand for the balance of the week. Dorothy Phillips, the celebrated emotional actress, is starring in this production, which has to do with capital and labor, but apart from this there is a sweet love story running through the play. It is quite out of the ordinary, in that the girl refuses to marry until she has brought sunshine into every workingman's home. There are many gripping scenes throughout the play, showing the agitation for a strike among factory men, with the usual mob scenes following the calling of a strike. These scenes call for strong acting, and the various parts are in able hands. Miss Phillips has a dual role to play. There are twin sisters, but one is lost in the great uprising and burning of buildings in Russia. The children are left in the charge of a maid, while the father is absent, and their home is destroyed in his absence. One girl is lost at the time of the fire and it is not until after a series of very exciting scenes that the father locates her. The story tells in a most interesting manner how true happiness and contentment alone comes through love—how capital and labor can get along in harmony when both sides endeavor to do their part. It shows the real cure for unrest in the world.

"The Right to Happiness," will be repeated to-night and Saturday night. It is an eight-reel feature. The bill also includes some good comedies.

"The Revelations of a Wife."

"Should a girl tell her prospective husband her past life?" is a very strong point unravelled in that mysterious dramatic offering, "The Revelations of a Wife," which will be offered for public approval for three days starting Thursday, April 29th, at the Grand Opera House. The play makes a strong plea for the depressed and innocent, and still it is filled with mysteries until the final drop of the curtain. In writing the play the author probably had in mind that the public is clamoring for something new theatrically, and the tremendous success in New York of plays of the mysterious order like "The Unknown Purple," "Three Faces East," "The Invisible Foe," "The Woman in Room Thirteen," "The Crimson Alibi at Nine-Forty-Five," etc., no doubt prompted him to write along this line.—Advt.

At the Strand.

"The Thunderbolt," one of the most dramatic pictures of the screen, was shown as the feature at the Strand on Thursday to a crowded house, and the American beauty, Kathleen McDonald, in the role of Ruth Pomroy captivated the audience. Thomas Meighen, who was such a signal success in "The Miracle Man," stars with Miss McDonald in this play which unfolds a Kentucky family feud in which the curse of implacable hate and a thirst for revenge that rested upon two generations were dissolved by love. Here Miss McDonald's rare gifts as a strong actress are seen at their best and recall "The Woman Thou Gavest Me" in which she scored a triumph. Thomas Meighen, as Bruce Corbin, was given his father's dying message to wipe out the Pomroy name, but instead of lethal weapons, secures possession of Pomroy's forged notes and forces him to give him his daughter in marriage, hoping thereby to carry out his long nourished design. He is beaten at his own game by the strong motherly instinct of his wife and succumbs as men have done before.

In addition to this great picture the audience was taken on a most delightful trip through Japan and Formosa, where the natives are seen making camphor and building houses from cane. Other features are the two comedy reel showing Skin-nay Malloy in the circus and Stub Pollard, and the million dollar reward for Betty Thorndyke. The musical numbers include "Past and Present," while Bert Caldwell sings "Let's All Be Good Pals Together," and "Love's Lullaby," both of which were greatly enjoyed.

Died While Operating.

Many in Brockville will hear with regret of the death on Sunday, at Middletown, N.Y., of Dr. Sidney F. Wilcox. He died while performing an operation. He was well known through visits to his sister-in-law, Mrs. G. T. Fulford, who practised his profession in New York city, and was a skillful surgeon.

Fire Damages Picker Room.

Fire broke out in the picker room in the Yorkshire Wool Stock Mills, Almonte, and the fire brigade was called out and soon quenched the blaze. Only the fact that this room is of cement, and practically fire-proof, saved the entire mill from the flames. The contents of the room were almost a complete loss.
