Men change with the seasons—for the butterfly girl. When she sees the last of the snow-birds winging his way northward and hears the chirping of the first harbinger of spring, her thoughts turn from the chap she skated with on the winter ice and flirted with by the fire-side.

She flits back to the chap of last summer—the one who played tennis so well or rowed on the placid lake or the one who walked by her side across the green golf links. She's changeable, and men to her are events which change with the seasons. Some girls are that way.

London's Crystal Palace. How many people are aware that the Crystal Palace, which will be the scene of the world's biggest industrial exhibition this year, was originally erected in Hyde Park and designed by a farmer's boy? Curiously enough, it was the need of a building in which an industrial exhibition could be adequately housed that led to the erection of the Crystal Palace. Representations were made to the Government, who ultimately allotted a site of eighteen acres facing Knightsbridge. Two hundred and thirty-three schemes for a building to hold the exhibits were considered and rejected. Time was getting short, and ultimately Sir Joseph Paxton, who from farmer's boy at 13, per week became head gardener to the Duke of Devonshire and acquired much fame as a horticulturist, hit upon the idea of a giant conservatory. He worked out the technical and engineering details within nine days. Critics said that so frail a structure would be reduced to a shapeless wreck in the first storm, and that when the sun shone the visitors would be grilled to a cinder. But no such disaster happened. The exhibition was a tremendous success, over 6,000,000 visitors passing through the turnstiles. The Government declined to buy the glass-house, however, which cost £176,000 to build. Ultimately a few public-spirited men clubbed together, bought the shell for £70,000, and rebuilt the great conservatory at Sydenham at a cost of £1,500,000. An English Mummy. An English mummy, to which the name of "Old Jimmy" has been irreverently given, is bothering the Rev. B. Saunders Lloyd, rector, and the warden and vestrymen of the ancient Church of St. James, behind the Mansion House Station. They have it on their hands and can get no trace of its origin or age, and they wish to dispose of it. It first came to the attention of the church authorities in 1856, when the great fire of London, whose ruins covered 395 acres, consumed the old church. In overhauling the vaults about that time the mummy was taken upstairs to be shown to the curious, and it was overlooked when the vaults were resealed. A special box was made for it, and it lay in a dark corner of the church for generations. Occasionally it was shown to special visitors, members of the royal family among them. Now the church authorities feel that it is entitled to decent burial and they have no place to put it. In any case, they hope to get rid of it, as it has given the old church an uneasy reputation. John S. Tooley, a former resident of Brockville, travelling salesman for the Buffalo Specialty company, with headquarters at Watertown, N. Y., during the last twelve years; died on Thursday following a long illness of Bright's disease. Despite the demand for labor of every kind all the letters of the alphabet, except four, are out of work.
