CASES IN SUPREME COURT

THE JUDGMENT IN BOTH WAS RESERVED.

Huchinbrooke Township Council Sued by John J. Johnson—Whig Publishing Company Versus the Eddy Company.

An aftermath of an accident which occurred some time ago, on thecession road, about four miles from Verona, was heard in non-jury sittings of the supreme court on Tuesday afternoon, when the case of John J. Johnson versus the corporation of the township of Huchinbrooke, was called.

Johnson and his wife were driving along the road, returning home from a wedding, when they were dumped out into a ditch. Mrs. Johnson had her right arm broken and her chest injured, and the suit was entered for damages, it being claimed that the accident was due to negligence on the part of the township in not keeping the road in proper repair. J. L. Whiting appeared as counsel for the plaintiff, and T. J. Rigney for the defence. Judgment was reserved.

Mr. Johnson and his wife gave evidence. Johnson stated that his wife became so nervous after the accident, that he had to dispose of the animal, as she would not drive with him.

Mrs. Johnson said that she had been laid up three months with a broken arm, and that to-day she suffered more or less from her injuries. Her arm was quite stiff and she found it a difficult task to dress herself.

Evidence was taken in the case of the British Whig Publishing Company versus the E. B. Eddy Company, Ltd., in which the plaintiffs claimed the sum of $5,224.37 for failure to carry out an agreement made between the parties for a supply of paper. Justice Middleton reserved his decision. A. B. Cunningham appeared for the plaintiffs, and G. Henderson, of Ottawa, for the defence.

There were just two witnesses in the case, Leman A. Guild, for the Whig, and Mr. Taylor, secretary of the Eddy Company. Mr. Taylor has charge of the sales end of the business.

The contract in question had to do with the supply of newsprint during the years 1916, 1917 and 1918. Mr. Guild gave evidence concerning the contract which called for the supply during these three years, at the rate of 150 tons a year. This amount was considered ample to meet the needs of the Whig for a year. A similar contract had been made for the years 1913-14 and 15. Evidence was offered to show that the supply given by the Whig fell short of that specified in the contract.

Mr. Taylor told about the contract being overrun in 1916 and also in 1917, but stated that following this the company came under the restrictions of the newsprint controller.

Mr. Cunningham held that the question hinged on the meaning of the clause in the contract. Some meaning must be given to the question of "whole requirements." The newspaper was entitled to its supply of 150 tons each year. Each year should go in the form of a separate contract, he held.

Wanamaker's sales for last week were five times the average of that time of the year. Saturday, the greatest day of the old Philadelphia merchant's attempt to bring down the cost of living, was likewise the greatest in the history of this store.

Best & Company promise reductions of from one-fifth to one-fourth on various women's wear; Bonwit-Teller quotes prices from 10 to 20 per cent. down and mentions other "very decided reductions." Macy's is having a big sale; so are Oppenheim, Collins & Company; Stern Brothers and Saks & Company. Some of James McCreery's prices are cut in half. The store has done quite attention to all wool suits at $25.50. In addition, four chain-stores of ready-made suits are going out of business for some private reason, and the shelves sag with suits which are supposed to be dirt cheap at the prices asked.

Wanamaker's does not expect any immediate effect on the manufacturing costs, but the executives of the store do believe that in time the ripples of this grand splash in the retail market will be felt in the factories. The immediate effect hoped for is that the speculator, hoarder and profiteer who have been withholding goods from the market, awaiting much higher prices, will be forced to sell at a fair price, if not at a loss.

Two Famous Sons of Prince Edward County

Every district village, town and city has its distinguished sons. In this respect not many can equal the present standing of Prince Edward County. Many of its young men have gone forth into the world and become leaders. Why, it could be hard for the casual visitor to that district of fertile farms to say, by the fact remains that they did leave home. The field of operation may not have been wide enough at home or the wanderers may not have been fitted for such occupations as might be found there.

Certainly in the case of two particular men, it has been proved that the whole province of Ontario, perhaps the whole Dominion of Canada, does not offer them enough scope for their ambitions nor their abilities. They are Lieut.-Col. W. Grant Morden and Col. P. D. Saylor. Both are famous soldiers, and achieved excellent service in the late war. Both are also young men, but although young they have reached positions which might be admired, if not envied, by most people.

Lieut.-Col. W. Grant Morden has been a prominent Canadian for many years. His daring and foresight are a matter of wonder to all who are connected with him in business matters. Forty years ago, he was born in Prince Edward County. Since that time he has been educated in Toronto, started upon a financial career in Montreal, been overseas with the first contingent, and transferred to the Royal Flying Corps. Immediately after the war he entered politics in England, and was elected to represent the riding of Chiswick in the British House of Commons. At the present time he is promoting the merger of the largest steel masters in England with the Dominion Iron and Steel Company and other steel companies in Canada.

Col. Grant Morden has an insight into affairs and a grasp of matters relative to big business which is reputed to be almost uncanny. Despite his colossal responsibilities and the work which is always before him, he finds time to indulge a few hobbies. He is an ardent admirer and collector of horses, thorough-bred cattle and deer-hounds. The flying experience which he acquired during the war was left him with a strong liking for commuting with the clouds via aeroplane. Besides the large steel interests with which he is concerned at the present, Col. Morden is connected with the Collingwood Shipbuilding Company, the Pacific Coast Coal Mines, the British Cellulose Co., Canada Securities Corporation, Prudential Trust Co., Canada Steamship Lines, Davie Shipbuilding Company and numerous smaller firms, most of them in this country.

PRICE SLASHING IS SPREADING FAR

Merchants of Other Places are Joining Procession of Reduced Prices.

Pittsburg, Pa., Post

After John Wanamaker, New York, announced that he would remit $1 in every $5 spent with him, the other great department stores hesitated just long enough to watch the first public reaction. By last mid-week several alert merchants had started similar sales and to-day there are few big stores in town that are not advertising reduction ranging from 20 per cent. on some articles to 50 per cent. on others.

Altman's, for one, is offering a very large stock of women's wear below the wholesale cost, and the manager of a large rival store today paid Altman's the tribute of admitting that the offer probably is absolutely on the level.

Even the "little fellows" in the outlying districts have fallen in line, depending on a greatly increased volume of sales to compensate for the loss of direct profits. Gerning's five small department stores in residential neighborhoods north of New York are following the Wanamaker plan all the way—that is, $1 back on every $5, a nickel back on every quarter, a cent back on every nickel spent over their counters.

The J. H. Blumenthal Company of Montreal wired Wanamaker's that an identical sale had been declared up there; Miller Brothers of Chattanooga, advertised a reduction of one-fifth on everything under their roof; so did Rosenthal, of Smythville, Arkansas.

and was eventually appointed director of sales for the Canadian Government. He took care of salvaged material, and was the right hand man of Sir Edward Kemp, Overseas Minister.

At the termination of hostilities and his eventual resignation from the military forces, Col. Saylor again took over his duties with the Good-year Company, until he left them recently to accept the offer of the Dunlop America.

One of these men for a province would be well worthy of comment, but when two men of such calibre were born in the same county, then that county has something to talk about. One is promoting a half billion dollar business scheme and the other is calmly receiving a yearly salary of half a hundred thousand. Prince Edward County has reason to be proud of them both, and the rest of the country can be proud of the county which fostered them.

Brigadier-General Fournier and six subordinates were acquitted in a court martial trial Tuesday at Paris of surrendering Mauberg fortress to the Germans in 1914.

The Paris police claim disclosure that shows seven large French cities were to be taken over by the Soviets had the recent strikes been successful.
