HELPLESS WITH RHEUMATISM

Until He Took "Fruit-A-Dies" The Fruit Medicine

Fruit-A-Dies
"I have been three years, I was confined to bed with rheumatism. I treated with doctors, and tried nearly everything without benefit. Finally, I tried 'Fruit-A-Dies' before I had used half a box I was relieved; the pain was stilled and the swelling started to go down. I continued taking this fruit medicine, improving all the time, and now I can walk about two miles and do light chores about the place."
ALEXANDER MURDO.
Box above, 6 for $2.50, trial size 25c. All 48 boxes or sent postpaid by Fruit-A-Dies Limited, Ottawa.

TOOTHACHE STOPS

When "ABSORBINE JR." is Placed in the Cavity.

LOVE and MARRIED LIFE by the noted author Idah McGione Gibson

A Gift From Ruth.
"Have you been happier with your children than you were before?" I asked Ruth.
"I should have died when Bobbie had left me if I hadn't had the children," she said.
"Then I am glad."
"Katherine, you don't mean--"
"For answer I held up the little baby cap I was making."
"Oh, I am so glad, so glad for you," said Ruth as she came over and kissed me. "You will say that you'll hold your own baby in your arms. Notwithstanding I have been very unhappy and very lonely since Bobby left me, yet I had to choose between him and one of the children. I presume she chose the child. I presume she chose the child, that's why he left me for Helen, but I can not help it. Why, when I think of little Bob showering kisses upon her, I nearly go mad, although I have grown used to the thought of Helen as Bobbie's wife. But I could never get used to the thought of Helen standing in the place of 'muvver' to little Bob."
"Perhaps you are different from most women."

Two Kinds of Women.
"They say there are two kinds of women. One who is all wife and one who is all mother. I suppose I am all mother."
Ruth bade me good by and again kissed me and congratulated me. She had hardly gotten home before she sent back to me a perfectly beautiful little baby frock with a note saying, "This, my dear, has been worn just three times, for the christening of each of my children. As I shall never have any more, I am sending it to you for the christening of your child, and I know you will be quite as happy with it as I am with my babies."
The tears dimmed my eyes so, as I looked over Ruth's gift, that for a few minutes I did not see an exquisite set of baby pins fastened to the back of the little slip. It was my first present and I was very, very happy.

All day long I sang and dreamed as I put in a myriad of little stitches on those tiny clothes. Then, when I was really too tired to sew any more, I walked toward the village to see if I could not meet the postman. I saw him coming toward me and I almost snatched the white misstive from him and then my heart suddenly almost stopped as I recognized the handwriting. It was not from my husband. It was from Karl Shepard. At first I thought I would not open it. I carried it between the thumb and forefinger of my hand, as though it were something I was afraid of. Once I dropped it, and as I stopped to pick it up my foot slipped and covered it with a dirty smudge.
Sounds Almost Symbolical.
It was almost symbolical. There was no reason why Karl Shepard should not write me a letter that was perfectly conventional. But after the poem I had received from him I was not sure what his next impulse would be and I was afraid to make the discovery. I picked the letter up and this time I stuffed it into my pocket. It was determined not to read it until I returned home. But so conscious was I that it was there that I was constantly putting my hand in my pocket and pulling it out again quickly as I felt that crackling paper as though I had touched a red-hot coal. Smilingly I greeted my friends, and it seemed to me that everyone in town was out and glad to see me. Many, many times I had to tell them that my husband, John, was down south.
"Looking after your oil wells eh?" said an old friend of my mother.
"You may be sure, Katherine, that neither your mother nor your father ever thought that land in Texas would ever bring in any money."
"Did you ever hear them speak about it?" I asked.
"Many times," she answered. "You see your mother bought that ground thinking perhaps that she and your father would go down there and build a little house where they could stay winters for his health."
Land Was a Wilderness.
"But they found that the land was in a wilderness, you might say, and your father never ceased to tease your mother about her vast interest in real estate. I wonder what he would say now could he know those interests would make you rich, Katherine!"
"I'm sure I do not know, Mrs. Jones, what he would say, but I'm also sure those lands will never make me rich, Charles, you know, has just returned, and says the wells are petering out."
"Oh, I'm very sorry; I expect that's the reason your husband has gone down."
I nodded silently and passed on. I had forgotten the curiosity of people in small towns.
Tomorrow--Karl's Letter.

FIRES AROUND NORTHBROOK

Charles Jackson Lost His Home By Fire On Friday.
Northbrook, May 24.--Fires continue raging on every side. Charles Jackson lost his home by fire Friday and is now homeless until a house can be erected. The fire started from the chimney.

The past week has been a rushing one for the Ore Chimney Mines. A swarm of investors have been present day and night. Mr. Walsh, of Lipton's Springs, W. S., and Charles A. Barron, of Toronto, were among those present.

C. C. Thompson sold a fine horse to Mr. Baker, at Harlowe during the week. Mr. and Mrs. Claude Thompson, of Elm Tree, are spending the week at Wilson Wood. Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Perkins motored to the Shier House, Saturday, from Fenlon Falls with the family.

Hiram Fletcher and a number of mining enthusiasts are at the Ore Chimney, well pleased with the progress being made. The many friends of Chas. Zinn, of Ayr, Ont., were pleased to have his friendly clasp again.

Potatoes remain high but plentiful enough to supply all demands. Mrs. A. E. Fletcher was a week-end guest at Dr. H. Fletcher's, Flinton.

TO-DAYS FASHION By MME. FRANCES

This Suit of Brown and White Checked Wool Velour is Bound With White Leather.

The high price of shoes apparently does not prevent the fashionably gowned woman from employing leather as a trimming on her smartly checked suits. White kid binds this interesting model of black and white checked velour. The belt is also white kid.
This type of coat, leather bound, is being worn with white skirts at seashore and mountain resorts. The collar may be fastened high at the throat or it may be worn open in shawl-like revers.
The hat of brown taffeta wears three brims of the silk bound with bias folds.

A Gift

of Fascinating Charm and Practical Value

To the June bride no gift could be more welcome than the charming beauty and everyday usefulness of silverware.

In HOLMES & EDWARDS Silverware these two virtues are combined in an eminent degree.

For, it is fashioned in patterns which have all the old-time fascination of dignified simplicity--exclusive designs which lend an exquisite beauty to any setting.

It is prized, too, for its superlative excellence. It is the highest-priced silverware made. Your jeweller will explain to you how skilled silversmiths use two patented processes to protect HOLMES & EDWARDS at the wear points.

Let him offer you gift suggestions.
