"General Post" To-night.
The most humorous comedy of the decade. These are the words of London critics used in describing "General Post," the comedy in which Mr. Percy Hutchinson is to appear at the Grand Opera House to-night, Friday and Saturday, with a special matinee on Saturday.
The play sparkles with wit and apt repartee—the brilliance of a peer's drawing room. Among the laugh lines of the show are these two bits of soldier philosophy: "Snobbery is a peace time complaint; it's like the German measles; it's gone completely out of fashion since the war," and "I've yet to discover the man whose head is screwed so firmly on his shoulders that a girl can't turn it, if she's determined to." Mr. Hutchinson, whose main claim to fame is as a light comedian, gives to Kingston what New York critics asked for so eagerly—a straight light comedy part. Incidentally, perhaps the strongest appeal of "General Post," is the many returned men who have seen it in London.—Adv't.

At Griffin's.
The movies offer few personalities as pleasing as that of youthful Charles Ray, who is featured at Griffin's for to-day, Friday and Saturday in "Red Hot Dollars," his newest picture. Once more he has one of those delightful man-boy roles that he plays with such wholesome abandon and at the same time with such expert knowledge of screen acting. The youthful star has the role of Tod Burke, a laborer in an iron foundry. He is only an insignificant cog in the big machine, until one day he saves his rich employer, Peter Barton, from the heavy timber when it crashes down from a travelling crane in the foundry. Tod himself is injured and Barton, out of gratitude, has him nursed back to health. The ironmaster gives him an executive job in the iron works, so that Tod is transferred from a grimy toiler in overalls to a perfectly groomed youth behind a huge roll-topped desk. But other things besides business success interest Tod, notably a girl and a feud that exists between Garton and her old grandfather. It all turns out happily, however, when Tod effects a reconciliation. Charles Ray is natural and engaging as ever and that is enough to insure the most exacting screen fan an entertaining evening. The seventh episode of that wonderful animal serial, "The Lost City," will also be shown, as well as a Sunshine comedy entitled "Training for Husbands," which is a scream from start to finish. Be sure and see this programme, which will be shown for the last half of the week.—Adv't.

At The Strand.
Exteriors of "Glenallen," the celebrated home of George Marshall Allen, at Convent, N.J., said to be the most authentic example in this country of Tudor architecture, is shown for the first time on the screen in "His House in Order," the new Paramount Artercraft picture starring Elsie Ferguson, which will be the attraction at the Strand Theatre to-day. Through Robert M. Haas, in charge of the art and technical department of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, permission to photograph the house was obtained. Mr. Haas was the designer. The house is an American adaptation of Compton Wynyates in England, and Mr. Allen took several trips abroad to study English architecture and buy furnishings and antiques before construction was begun. It took five and a half years to build the house. "His House in Order" is a story of the troubled life of Nina Graham and Filmer Jesson, which almost has a disastrous outcome. Miss Ferguson has the role of Nina, which was created in this country by Margaret Livingston, and Holmes Herbert plays Filmer, which John Drew first interpreted in America. Others in the cast include Vernon Steel, Marie Burke, Margaret Linden and Lawrence Johnson. Hugh Ford was director.—Rdvt.

Will Increase the Work Of the Division Court

Judge H. A. Lavelle informs the Whig that the recent act passed by the Ontario Legislature will tend to increase the business of the Division court. According to the new ruling, which goes into effect on September 1st, the sum for which a person can be sued in Division Court has been increased. The increase in Division Court will likely have a tendency to decrease the work of the county court.
