MUSINGS OF THE HOUR

PUBLIC OPINION

Unfortunate.

One of the few unfortunate things about life is that there are so few days in a fortnight.

Fresh Revelations Daily.

Every day gives Ontario better reason for having thrown out the Hearst administration in 1919.

Jesse Was a Fibber.

Jesse James had an ability, but he never exaggerated $40 a month for a small house that is only worth $15 a month.

Oiling the Machine.

We pass both to more efficient care every day. Help us. See how absolutely speculation took flight at Ottawa since the electoral machinery of the Meighen was increased.

A Real Overalls Club.

To one Ohio city 2,000 business and professional men have announced that they will give the day's earnings each week to farmers. This is an "Overalls Club" that is worthy of its name.

Insufficient.

Women who fall in love with white spats and a blonde cane, and marry their owner, should understand that the divorce court does not recognize a temporary aberration of mind as sufficient basis for a separation.

Rippling Rhymes

WALT MASON

THE MODERN WAY.

I do as little as I can, and ask the highest pay; that's why I am an also ran, now that I'm bent and gray. I toiled along, year after year, as every job I'd touch; I always had a deadly fear that I would do too much. I've heard of men who strive to give full value for their wage; such people are too good to live, and never reach old age. Such people live in story books, and tracts and sacred tales, and many years have passed, gadzooks, since I have seen such males. Like other independent wights who swell the toiling throngs, I've always stood up for my rights, and whooped about my wrongs. I've pawed around in noble rage, and shot all kinds of brine; the rights of those who paid my wage was no concern of mine. And now that I am gray and bent I cannot find a place; employers will not pay a cent—they do not like my face. They scorn me when, in woe arrayed, with work I'd get in touch; they've heard I always was afraid that I would do too much.

—WALT MASON.
