Iced "Primus Tea" is Fashion's Decree

Iced tea is now served at meals and at every social function during the hot summer months.

Iced tea actually quenches thirst, refreshes, stimulates, besides tasting wonderfully good and being wonderfully good for health also.

But in order to be the real thing, iced tea must contain good tea and be rightly made.

Made the following way, iced tea will be delicious, and fragrant.

Take one teaspoonful of tea for every two cups. Four on fresh boiling water and allow to infuse five minutes. Decant the liquor off the leaves, bottle it and place it on ice as soon as sufficiently cool. To serve, pour into tall glasses partly filled with chopped ice. A slice of lemon should float on the surface of each glass, sweeten to taste with sugar syrup previously prepared.

Watch for our PRIMUS TEA advertisement a week from to-day, and learn how to make delicious TEA FUNCH and MOCK CLARET.

Always ask your grocer for "PRIMUS TEA" the brand "Primus" insures uniform flavor and guaranteed purity.

LOVE and MARRIED LIFE by the noted author Idah McGlone Gibson

John's Money-spending Habits.
"Where do you want the twin beds put," called John.
"I thought it was decided," I answered, "that you and I were to have the upper rooms on the west side of the house."
"All right," he answered, "but you might come out and tell me where you want the rest of the things."
"Oh, looky here, John! I want to talk to Katherine," called Alice.
"You know where to put that little collection of furniture that you had over at mother's."
"Little collection," snorted John as he came into the room, "why there are two van loads."
"Well, John, you get the beds fixed for me and I will try and have the men send up a few cheap dishes and kitchen utensils, and we can get along with them until my mother's spode and china comes from the old house."
"Oh, are you having more things sent from your mother's house," asked John in a relieved tone.
"Why, yes, I have had nearly a carload sent down," I said.
"Will you be ready to go shopping to-morrow," Katherine, interrupted Alice.
"Rough Talk by John."
"She is not going shopping until we find out just what we want," said John roughly.
"Well, John, I must have a number of things, if you want to get away from the hotel right away."
"Then for Heaven's sake get them," said John in cooperation, "I feel just as though I were in a taxi with the meter working double time. Why don't you take the car and go with Alice and buy the things this evening, Katherine?"
"Do you want me to open a charge account again at Blanks?" John hesitated a moment. "Yes, yes, go on and do it," he answered, "but I hate to let them think that I have forgiven them for the way that they treated me about those baby do-daddies."
"Yes, it is too bad to have to eat your own words," was his gruff reply. "I am determined to get into this house to-morrow night if possible."
"Katherine, do you intend to take the baby over to the new house before it is in any sort of order, and you are able to get servants to help you take care of it?" asked Alice as we got into the motor.
"Not at all, my dear. I haven't the slightest intention of doing such a thing," I answered.
"Best Thing to Do."
"I think that the best thing to do is to go to the intelligence office and find some one to help run the house, then," was Alice's comment.
"How many servants do you think the dominant color in this decoration. The décolletage was also outlined with embroidery, while around the waistline a ribbon girdle of orange-colored silk was draped in seemingly careful manner. It was tied in the front so that the long streamers gave color as the revealing breeze tossed them about.

MAGIC BAKING POWDER

The rough straw hat was enormous. Its dark blue hue perfectly carried out the tones of the wrap. Lilies of the valley with their bright green leaves flared from the base of the crown until they formed a regular barricade about it. The gloves were of very soft suede that matched the pongee. Altogether, one of the most effective costumes I saw.
The dress could readily be copied by any one who has a little knowledge of dressmaking. It might be developed in altogether different fabrics. I think if you duplicate it you would be delighted with the result if you combine navy taffeta and foulard. Or you might choose one of the lilac and orchid shades that are very fashionable at this time.
I would suggest that you make the pleated flounces of taffeta and the bodice of foulard. That would be most effective. Instead of embroidery you might substitute bands of taffeta. Then you would have a very modish frock for the affairs of the summer afternoon.
SOCIAL AT INVERARY.
Gordon Churchill, Moosomin, Saskatchewan, Gave a Fine Address.
Inverary, Aug. 2.—Rev. Calvert conducted quarterly service on Sunday morning. The social on W. H. Bartell's lawn on Friday night was a decided success in every particular. The programme was enjoyed by every person and consisted of readings, solos and addresses. Of special interest was an address from Gordon Churchill, who was stationed here eight years ago, but who has since obtained his B.A., and is at present teaching in a Collegiate Institute in Moosomin, Saskatchewan. Preston Gibson, Thomas Arthur and Will Arthur have purchased new cars. The cottages at Loughborough Lake are filled with tourists at present. The hay crop is about gathered. An average crop is predicted.

Miss Alga Arthur is absent for a couple of weeks. She is spending her holidays at Seely's Bay and Lyndhurst. Among recent callers were: Miss Carrie Davey, of Kingston, at James McAllum's; Mrs. J. Gerald, of Kingston, with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Drader; Miss Dickson at J. H. Hughson's.
"Can't afford to buy me a new costume? Why, before you married me you said you were well off!" "So I was—but I didn't know it!"
Retribution may be late in starting, but it reaches the one it is after.

Stinginess is Admitted.
"John Gordon, even if he is my brother," said John, "has one great fault. He has been very stingy with those who were dependent upon him in any way while he arrogated to himself the privilege of throwing his money away royally if he felt like it. There isn't a man in this town who really makes more money than John, but he has never saved any of it. He does not even have the luxuries that other people would have under the same circumstances. He just lets it dribble through his fingers and then he is angry because he has been such an idiot and takes it out of those who are near him."
"You don't like your brother very well, do you, Alice?"
"Yes, Katherine, I like him very much. He is my only brother, you know, but that is the reason why I probably see his faults quicker than anyone else. Like many other men who will not listen to reason and who only think of themselves and their own pleasures, forgetting that the greatest pleasure in the world is making someone besides themselves happy, my brother John is always reaching for something he knows not what."

Diary of a Fashion Model

By GRACE THORNTON-CLIFFE

She Describes a Very Handsome Costume Seen at the Races.
An excellent place for the study of style is Belmont Park. So many types of people throng to the race track!
Some were absorbed in the horses, but others apparently were there only because society approves. How fascinating to note how the different types of people dress!
Among those who consider the sport as sport and not merely an occasion for the display of pretty clothes is Mrs. Minto. A great horse-woman, she always dresses most unostentatiously, but there is always something noteworthy about her appearance.
Near her was a very attractive-looking young woman. I did not recognize her, although familiar with most of our society leaders. Whether she was from abroad was uncertain, but I made a hurried sketch of her wrap. It has many delightful possibilities. The style, as you will note, is marked by great originality. The wrap—for it is apart of coat, part cape—is developed from lovely dark blue duvetyne. It falls from the shoulders in straight, soft folds. The front is elaborated with lozenge-shaped pieces of black silk braid, and from outer edges of these long loops of silk braid depend. These form pendulous stems for acorn-like buttons that are made of dark blue silk set in cups of the silk braid. The latter are elaborated with embroidery in tinsel.
On the sides the decoration is repeated. The coat is collared with a double fold of the blue duvetyne, and it may be raised or lowered according to desire. Originally at the neckline is a shoulder cape of knife-pleated taffeta silk that matches the tones of the duvetyne.
The lining is of bright orange-colored satin.
When the coat was opened I caught a glimpse of the dress. It, too, bespoke the individuality of the wearer. It was made of natural-toned pongee. The skirt—in three distinct tiers—was finely knife-pleated in contrast to the plain bodice. The corsage was finished with very short sleeves bound with narrow pieces of embroidery. Orange was
