

EASY TO DARKEN YOUR GRAY HAIR

You Can Bring Back Color and Lustre With Sage Tea and Sulphur.

When you darken your hair with Sage Tea and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it's done so naturally, so evenly. Preparing this mixture, though, at home is messy and troublesome. At little cost you can buy at any drug store the ready-to-use preparation, improved by the addition of other ingredients called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning, all gray hair disappears, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully darkened, glossy and luxuriant.

Gray, faded hair, though no disgrace, is a sign of old age, and as we all desire a youthful and attractive appearance, get busy at once with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound and look years younger.

England Still Retains Her Financial Supremacy

In Spite of the Great War

ENGLAND'S remarkable standing since the armistice has rather shaken the faith of those who believed and declared that the financial centre of the world as the result of the war would shift from London to New York, and that Great Britain would have to yield her old-time supremacy to the United States. B. M. Talbot, writing in the Sun and New York Herald, goes so far as to say that England remains the centre of finance. Mr. Talbot writes: "There was a period of about six or seven months after the armistice during which it was openly declared here that the whole of Europe, including Great Britain, was hopelessly bankrupt. There is nothing peculiar or puzzling in the fact that America should have thought England bankrupt, for it was at least six months after hostilities ceased before England herself understood just where she stood. But all that has passed, and we now have concrete figures showing that British trade is mounting rapidly to the pre-war level.

The financial centre of the world does not necessarily have to be the trade centre of the world. That is, it need not be the place where the most goods are manufactured or sold to other countries. "To be the financial centre London or New York must have the best facilities for handling the business transactions necessary in order that goods may be exchanged between the country and another. There must be smooth working banking machinery first of all. That condition is so broad as to be nearly all-inclusive. It involves properly operated money markets, stock and commodity exchanges, brokerage facilities, stable currency, broad bill market, and numerous other services, such as may be found within a narrow radius of Wall street or Lombard street. Insurance is another important factor. Ships are another. Tariff laws are another.

Then in addition there is one more condition that perhaps has more to do with a nation's international financial supremacy than any other one thing. That is the inherent spirit of restless adventure on the part of capital seeking to push out further and further into new and unexplored fields in search of treasure yet undiscovered.

"The secret of the supremacy of every great centre of finance from the ancient days of Byzantium down to more modern Rome, Madrid and London, was the eagerness of the wealthy class to send ships to distant shores to traffic with unknown races. "We examine the banking facilities and other qualifications of both America and England and find that the latter has much superior machinery. But that is chiefly due to the longer experience in dealing with international problems of a financial nature. The same applies to English shipping, which has no peer in any merchant marine in the world.

"If one concludes, therefore, that America has not won the financial supremacy of the world, the conclusion must not be drawn on the premise that American bankers were throttled by outside competition or had no opportunity to establish the necessary working facilities and gain the required experience. "The thing that was lacking was adventuresome capital.

"If Britain is the world's greatest shopkeeper, and that position, depending solely on the spirit of adventure on the part of capital, is the ambition of other nations—why does not capital of the United States develop this wonderful pluck and thus capture the financial leadership?

"Because there is not the same necessity for the spirit of adventure in the international sense. This leads again to the geographical location of England as contrasted with that of the United States. "In a sense capital in America is just as adventuresome as capital in England. But when America needs cotton she finances it in the south-eastern states. England has to come to the United States or go to Egypt. America's oil, tin, iron ore, cereals, timber, tobacco and other products can be financed within her own borders. England must go to the ends of the earth. If her capital is to be employed at all it must seek far away fields.

"It is the geographical location that makes England great. Her emergence from the reconstruction period will find her with a more solid foundation than ever. To speak of her as bankrupt is worse than nonsense. She will never be bankrupt unless some catastrophic overhauling of continental Europe, due to a result of the war."

Palalay shawls. No Palalay shawl has been woven since 1880, when the beautiful shawls went out of fashion and none is likely ever to leave the looms again. The shawl had its origin in the ambition of the Paisley weavers to produce on the loom the amazingly elaborate patterns wrought by the needle, of the Cashmere shawls that had been sent home from the East by Scottish officers and traders, and they surpassed their models.

Painful, Indeed. "There's was a painful courtship." "Yes?" "He is a dentist, and met her first as a patient."

George F. Palmer has leased the Hudson property, Deseronto, for merely occupied as Whitton's pool room, and will open an office. J. J. TELLS DYSPEPTICS WHAT TO EAT

Avoid Indigestion, Sour Acid Stomach, Heartburn, Gas On Stomach, Etc.

Indigestion and practically all forms of stomach trouble, say medical authorities, are due nine times out of ten to an excess of hydrochloric acid in the stomach. Chronic "acid stomach" is exceedingly dangerous and sufferers should do either one of two things.

Either they can go on a limited and often disagreeable diet, avoiding foods that disagree with them, that irritate the stomach and lead to excess acid secretion or they can eat as they please in reason and make it a practice to counteract the effect of the harmful acid and prevent the formation of gas, sourness or premature fermentation by the use of a little Bisurated Magnesia at their meals.

There is probably no better, safer or more reliable stomach antacid than Bisurated Magnesia and it is widely used for this purpose. It has no direct action on the stomach and is not a digestant. But a teaspoonful of the powder or a couple of five grain tablets taken in a little water with the food will neutralize the excess acidity which may be present and prevent its further formation. This removes the whole cause of the trouble and the meal digests naturally and healthfully without need of peppin pills or artificial digestants.

Get a few ounces of Bisurated Magnesia from any reliable druggist. Ask for either powder or tablets. It never comes as a liquid, milk or citrate and in the bisurated form is not a laxative. Try this plan and eat what you want at your next meal and see if this isn't the best advice you ever had on "what to eat."

ON THE ROAD, NOT ON PAPER

Many a dealer honestly thinks that he sells wonderful cars and says so, glowingly. But after all, that's only what he thinks, and his idea may not be yours.

A car is valuable to you, not for what a dealer says about it, but because of what it will do for you on the road. That's where your car will make you happy or unhappy.

We have never been able to do justice to the Reo Six on paper. Words and pictures fall short. But on the road, where the only thing that counts is the merit of the car itself—there is where you certainly know, first hand and for yourself, that this amazing Reo Six is a car after your own heart.
