RELATING RECOLLECTIONS

WRITES ABOUT THE WELBANKS OF MILFORD.

Those Whom He Knew in the Early Fifties—The Welbanks Descended From U. E. Loyalist Stock.

Pictou Times.
T. H. Slaven, Hollister, California, the writer of "Recollections of the Welbanks of Milford" which appears below, will be eighty-eight years old on the 21st of October. Mr.
Slaven is the oldest of a family of twelve, only three of whom are now living—himself, Fred Slaven and Miss Mary Slaven, Pictou. Mr.
Slaven has a faultless memory, is a clear and expressive writer, and we hope to have many more interesting sketches of early life in South Marysburgh and Athol from his pen.

Recollections of Welbanks of Milford.

Seeing an account of the death of Thomas Welbanks, of South Bay, not very long ago, in the Times, called to the writer's mind the many Welbanks that he knew in the early '50's. In Milford there lived John B.
Welbanks, a stalwart man in size, who had married Nancy Clapp, a splendid woman, and who had been a school teacher. When I was a small boy I attended her school in a log building on Jim Ackerman's place.
In Milford there also lived David R.
Welbanks, a fine looking man, who kept a hotel. He had taken for his wife a Miss Lane, daughter of Squire Lane of South Bay. This good lady was also a school teacher. Hiram Welbanks in the late forties lived near Reuben Rorabeck's, on or near what is now known as Royal street.
His wife, who was an Ostrander, died in early life, and left him with two children, Frank and Cecelia. The last I knew of Hiram he was in Kingston and held a job in the sheriff's office. Then there was John Welbanks, of Royal street, a rich old fellow. Mrs. Welbanks, his wife, was an Ostrander, and one of the best of women. There was a large family, and the daughters married Frank Case, a business man for many years in Pictou. Pegan Welbanks was raised by John Welbanks, his uncle. He married and settled down in Long Point country. I think Squire Thomas Welbanks, father of the late Thomas, lived on the north side of South Bay. He was a Minaker, one of the members of that estimable family among the early settlers in the South Bay country. Squire Thomas and his estimable wife raised a large family. I remember the names of several of them. There were Hamilton, the late Thomas. Ar-drew, Calvin, Hiram, and their sisters, Malvina and Gertrude. About twenty years ago I met Webster Welbanks, a son of Calvin's, in San Francisco. He and his cousin, one of the Minaker boys, were in business there. At that time of South Bay there lived George A. Welbanks; his wife was also a Minaker. The children consisted mostly of girls. At the head of the bay also lived William Welbanks, generally known as "Bill" Welbanks. I don't remember who his wife was, anyhow there was quite a family of boys and girls.
Of the boys I remember the names, Palen and William, the latter I think married Tabitha Rorabeck who went to my school on Royal street in the early '50's. Tabitha was a close student, and a school teacher.
The last to mention of a number of names is David Welbanks, who lived on the south side of South Bay.
David had quite a large family of boys and girls. I named one of the girls—called her after my mother—Eliza. If she is living she will be near three score and seven. One of the boys, married Mary Triplett and Mary, like all the other boys and girls on the south side, went to my school in '51 and '52. The Welbanks family descended from U. E.
Loyalist stock.

ONE OF HORSES DIED

A Misfortune That Befel the Thompson 12os.
Denbigh, Aug. 20.—Messrs William and Caleb Thompson who a few months ago disposed of their real estate here, and moved to Seesley's Bay, made a return trip to their old home after their live stock and some chattels, but met with the misfortune that one of the latter's horses, a valuable animal, took sick and died while here. Mr. and Mrs. Charles Marquardt, Hardwood Lake, were welcome visitors at Charles Steins, Sunday before last and Herbert Warlick spent last week and Sunday visiting friends in Rag-lan township. Mrs. M. Ready, her daughter, Frances, and son, Herbert, arrived home again from Pictou where they enjoyed a pleasant visit with the former's mother, Mrs. William Hoppins. Lorne Ready and his sister, Pearl, left last week for Winnipeg. Quite a number from this village and vicinity attended the picnic in Matacatdia, on the 11th inst, and report having had a good time. Herbert Fritsch, who was away visiting relatives and former neighbors, who have moved to Listowel and other places in western Ontario, has arrived home again very much pleased with that part of the country. E. C. Bebe, North Bay, who with his three daughters, paid a visit to relatives and friends here and in Vennacher left again for their present homes.

Burns Wore Big Hat.

A Scottish antiquarian has been making inquiries at a London hatter, "with a large clientele of men of the intellectual classes," as to the size of hat that must have been worn by Robert Burns, whose skull measurement was 22 3/4 inches.
It seems that 3 1/2 is the size for so considerable a girth. According to the same "intellectual" hatter, Sir Walter Scott's hat was a full 6 1/2, his head-circumference being 20 1/4 inches.
A Dumfries hatter says no Dumfries man among his customers takes Burns' size in hats nowadays. From hats like these said Scotia's grandeur sprang.—London Chronicle.

Daniel V. McIsaac, attorney for Charles Ponsi, has filed a petition with the clerk of the United States District Court at Boston, denying that Ponsi is bankrupt and insolvent.

"MACBETH" CASTLE.

Two of the Last Five Earls Met Violent Deaths.

All hail, Macbeth; Hail to thee, Thane of Glamis.
All hail, Macbeth; Hail to thee,
Thane of Cawdor.
All hail, Macbeth, who shall be king hereafter.

So chanted the three witches who lured Macbeth, by promises of power, on to the black deeds that have made the name a synonym for treachery justly rewarded. And the castle of Cawdor has come down to us, thanks to Shakespeare's great drama, as a scene of dark crimes and unearthly visitations, says the Kansas City Star.

Whatever may have been the historical accuracy of Shakespeare's story, Cawdor ever since has had an evil reputation. In the play Macbeth was made Thane of Cawdor, the second highest honor granted by the witches, in payment for his early loyalty to King Duncan in a war against the Norwegians. But Macbeth, inspired by the witches and driven on by the ambitions of his cold-blooded wife, slew Duncan when the king paid a visit to Cawdor and followed this murder with numerous others.

Now the estates of the Earl of Cawdor—earl is but a changed version of thane—are to be sold. Hard times have come upon the Cawdors, as well as upon many other titled landowners in England and Scotland.
So the great castle of Cawdor and the finely wooded lands surrounding it are on the market.

Whether the old castle now standing on the estate is the one Shakespeare had in mind is uncertain.
There was a castle there in the morning of a Scottish history. The one there now must date back 100 years or more, and it has been changed little in the centuries since it was built. There is a story that Thane William of Cawdor was granted permission to build a castle by the Scottish king whom he served. He was sorely perplexed as to a site, but in a dream he was told to build on the treasure he had collected in a coffer, then to bind it on a donkey's back and build his castle wherever the donkey should stop. The donkey stopped beside a hawthorn tree and lay down to rest. The castle is said to have been built about the tree.
Certain it is that a hawthorn tree stood for many years in the lowest vault of the tower.

The Cawdors have a grim history, one filled with tragedy and no small amount of misfortune. The recent career of the family serves to illustrate this phase of the Cawdor history. There have been five earls of Cawdor in twenty years, and two of the five met violent deaths. The present earl is only 20 years old.

Muriel of Cawdor perhaps is the most famous in the line. At least she serves as a figure in one of the old Scottish folk romances. She was sought after by the Earl of Argyll for his son, Sir John Campbell, and was kidnapped when only 12 years old.
Her uncles, the Cawdors, heard of the kidnapping and set out to recover her. They came upon her cap-tors and slew eight of them, all sons of Campbell of Inverliver, and obtained what they believed was the girl.
But it turned out to be only a sheaf of straw dressed in Muriel's clothes.
The Campbells had escaped with Muriel herself and she became the bride of her captor.

It was only nine miles from the castle that the Battle of Culloden was fought and the hopes of the Pre-tender dashed. And Lord Lovat, the Scottish Jacobite, sought refuge in the garret of the castle after the failure of his Stuart rebellion.

The drawbridge still hangs in front of the castle, as it has hung for centuries, and the castle towers, gray and grim, above the birches and oaks about it. There is something of an eerie and impressive about the ancient place, full in keeping with its history and its romantic literature. The thought of it passing into irreverent hands, to be changed and modernized, cannot be other than unpleasant.

Fathers and Sons.

The Hon. Frank Russell, K.C., who has been appointed to the vacancy on the Chancery Bench caused by the promotion of Mr. Justice Younger to the Court of Appeal, is the fourth son of the late Lord Chief Justice, Lord Russell of Killowen. He is 52 years of age, was called to the Bar in 1893, and took silk in 1908.
The appointment gives us two sons of Lord Chief Justices who have followed so far in their fathers' footsteps as to reach judgeships. Lord Coleridge is the other. His father was succeeded in the Chief Justiceship by his new colleague's father, Lord Russell of Killowen. The sons of politicians follow their fathers more often. Lord Gladstone and Lord Salisbury are Cabinet Ministers whose fathers were Premiers. But Pitt and his father, the Earl of Chatham, are the only father and son who have both been Premiers.

Queer Flower of the Autumn.

The extensive list of varieties of the chrysanthemum grown to-day is due to the most minute attention given to the cultivation of this plant, since first introduced into England, said to be in 1790, by a French gardener (Mon. Sels), and grown at Kew, the original being a poor thing indeed when compared with the exquisite and varied flowers produced at the present time. The small flowered pompons and the grotesque flowered Japanese sorts are of a comparatively recent date, the former having originated from the Chusan daisy, a variety introduced by Mr.
Robert Fortune in 1846, and the latter in 1852 by the same gentleman, who journeyed to China and Japan on voyages of discovery in connection with the plant, under the auspices of the Royal Horticultural Society.

All Wrong!

Some people's idea of sympathy is to back a poor invalid into a corner and tell him how miserable he is looking.

A Costly Joke.

"Try honor," explained the traffic cop, "he was burning up the pavement like the old Nick himself."
"Guess that's right," agreed the humorous autoist. "You see, I'm a regular speed devil."

"Fair enough," countered the judge. "Then I'll fine you twenty dollars for being in such a hell of a hurry."
