PROTEST RESULTS IN SOME REFORMS

Koreans Better Treated, but Want Independence, Missionary States.

Toronto Globe: After six years' work among the Koreans in Manchuria, Rev. William Scott of Kingston, Ont., has returned on furlough. In an interview with a representative of The Globe, Mr. Scott stated that some reforms had been instituted by the Japanese in Korea as a result of the presence brought to bear in international missionary societies and general protests against atrocities in that country. Free speech and freedom of the Press had been granted to the people, and Koreans were now permitted to hold positions as School Principals, said Mr. Scott.

"Are they still hankering after independence?" asked The Globe.
"No yes, it's more than a hanker, they mean to get it," replied Mr. Scott. "The Manchurians do not see why they should be under the domination of Japan. They are only twenty years behind the Japanese in the matter of modern progress. They are just as intelligent as the Japs; they may not be so quick, but they are more solid, and they are bigger physically."

Mr. Scott had been stationed in Manchuria close to the northern border of Korea, where many thousands of Koreans have crossed the line and are engaged in agriculture. The mission is under the Canadian Presbyterian Foreign Mission Board.

A Great Potato Crop.
There are lots of potato growers hereabouts, but none of them can put it over Superintendent Baldwin, of the city home for the aged. The garden of this home has a bumper crop of Irish Cobblers, far more than the inmates can consume in a year, and the board of directors will no doubt have to put some on the market in the autumn. Superintendent Baldwin is an expert gardener, as well as an efficient home manager.
