There are novelties of a grand and sonage, Rev. Daniel Mick united in varied character embodied in the marriage Miss Adorna Ida Kane, two and three-quarter hours it takes daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George H. to present F. Stuart Whyte's new Kane, Sydenham street, to Glenville English pantomine "Babes In The Wood." In its dozen scenes of magnificent splendor and gorgeous costumes are introduced splendid singing, artistic dancing, and mirthful comedy, by artists who have proven their worth on the continental stage, and in Canada. Those prime favorites Dorothy Mackay and May Strachan, as sweet and percocious as ever are the Babes of the Fairy Tale and Harriett Fawn and Charles Cardel will be seen in new Cockney characters, Victor Dyer and Thomas Ellis are new importations from London for the cast. The most notable of the many scenes in the pantomine are The Old Village Fair, a replica of Hogarth's engraving, with the archery tournament and side shows, all produced with medival colorings, and Capid's Garden, a new and novel idea in stage craft.
