Annually use these tablets of organic iron—Nuxated Iron—to build up red blood, strength and endurance.

Dr. H. B. Vail, formerly Physician in the Baltimore Hospital and a Medical Examiner says: "There are thousands whose bodies are getting and breaking down at a time when they should be enjoying the perfect health which carries defiance to disease simply because they are not awake to the condition of their blood. By allowing it to remain thin, pale and watery, they are not giving the natural life forces of the body a chance to do their work. Iron in red blood food and in my experience I have found no better means for building the red blood corpuscles and helping to give increased power to the blood than organic iron—Nuxated Iron. Nuxated Iron comes in tablet form only and does not contain any ordinary metallic iron but only the finest quality of pre-digested organic iron which is easily assimilated by the blood."

LOVE and MARRIED LIFE by the noted author Idah McGione Gibson

The Wages of Sin. "What else did she say?" I asked Miss Parker. "She said there had been an automobile accident," she repeated. "Did she say Mr. Gordon was hurt?"

"No," she said to tell you that she would be right over."

Although I had a feeling that Miss Parker was keeping something back, I did not press her further.

I had a sudden feeling as though I wanted cold water on my face and hands and I went into the bathroom saying: "If Mrs. Staunton comes before I have washed my face tell her I'll be with her in a minute."

I raised my head from the bowl to reach a towel and caught a glimpse of my face in the glass. I did not know myself. Every bit of color I had ever had in my cheeks was gone. Even my lips were only a grayish blue and my eyes were red-rimmed from anxiety and loss of sleep. My hair was in great disarray and I remember when I did come to a realization of the tragic face I saw in the mirror just now, I laughed. That hysterical laugh brought Miss Parker to me immediately.

"What is the matter, Mrs. Gordon?"

"Nothing, nothing at all, only I look so queer, so funny in the mirror."

"Here, let me wipe your face," she said and then I was aware that the water was running down in streams from my hair. Sighting her actions to the words, she began to dry my face and hands.

"I can do that," I said petulantly. "I don't think Alice will care anyway, whether I look well or not. She ought to be here by this time."

"Mrs. Staunton is going to stop for the doctor."

"Why does she do that, didn't you tell her that we had him earlier in the evening and the baby was all right now?"

"No, I didn't tell her."

"Well, you better try to catch her on the phone before she leaves. I think it is foolish to ask the doctor to come over here at this hour in the morning, when the baby is so much better."

"Go on, or you will not catch her."

I said, I made me impatient to see her stand looking at me so queerly. Without a word she went into the other room and I again put my face down into the bowl of cool water.

Before I had finished drying it she came back. "I was not able to get Mrs. Staunton," she said. "She had already left the house."

"I am very sorry. The doctor will think we are a set of hysterical women."

"I do not think he will," remarked Miss Parker quietly.

"But Alice was crying so over the phone, she could hardly talk to me."

"She had composed herself before she answered my questions."

"I am glad of that."

Miss Parker slipped from the room and came back with something in a glass. "Drink this," she said.

"Why, I'm all right. Why are you so worried about me?"

"I'm not worried, Mrs. Gordon, but you must remember you've had a very hard night and if anything has happened Mr. Gordon, as Mrs. Staunton seemed to intimate, I think you had better be fortified."

I swallowed the spirits of ammonia without making a sound further fuss. "I think they are here," said Miss Parker, as we heard the elevator stop in the hallway. Unconsciously I braced myself for what was coming.

I knew that my waiting was over. Intuitively, I walked to the place from which I could face the door. Miss Parker opened it before Alice had time to rap. She looked at me expectantly.

"I cannot understand," I said. "Just why you have come and brought the doctor. The baby is very much better and I am all right."

"Oh, dearest, don't you understand?" said Alice, throwing her arms about me. "Doctor, you must do something for her."

"I think you had better do something for Alice, doctor."

"But don't you understand, don't you understand, there has been an automobile accident?"

"Are you trying to tell me that John is hurt?"

Alice bowed her head and said softly: "Tell her, doctor."

The doctor led me to the sofa and gently seated me.

"My dear Mrs. Gordon, you must be very brave; as your sister says, there has been an automobile accident. Your husband and Miss Moreland are both dead."

Told in the Twilight

(Continued From Page Three.) On Monday evening, Sept. 13, Mrs. W. R. Givens threw open the spacious rooms of "Maitland House" for a most charming dance in honor of Miss Elizabeth Cunningham and Mrs. Givens' son, Henry Hill. frocks of every hue danced on the polished floor, sat on the wide verandah or strolled under the fine old trees of the beautiful grounds, sloping down to the lake. During the evening, Miss Margaret Tomlinson, (Winnipeg), Mrs. Givens' niece, delighted the guests with a clever exhibition of interpretive dancing. Supper was served about midnight and then the dancing to the strains of music provided by the excellent orchestra began again and continued for several hours when a reluctant good night was said and one of the most successful dances of the season came to an end. Here is the new-day way, gentle, sure and scientific. It was created by a noted chemist in this world-famed laboratory.

It is ending millions of corns by a touch. The relief is quick, and it ends them completely.
