LOVE and MARRIED LIFE by the noted author Idah McGione Gibson

Elizabeth and John. "Katharine, I really believe you're jealous," said Alice mischievously as Karl came around the bed to lay the baby in his arms.

"No, I'm not," I answered, but my voice was so decisive that I almost felt as though it did have a hint of jealousy in it.

"Katharine will find that she has no occasion to be jealous of me," said Karl. "Although you may not know it, my dear, the baby knows you very well. She has been with you every day. We were hoping that her tender little hands would help to bring you back. She always knew and remembered you, Katharine, although you seemed to have forgotten her."

"He put the baby in my arms and her little moist mouth wandered over my cheek. She did not offer to go back to Karl and I was a little ashamed to feel that I was very glad when she just cuddled down a little closer and gave a sigh of babyhood content and closed her eyes."

"I really believe she's sleepy, poor darling," I exclaimed.

"No, it means," said Karl, "that she is perfectly contented and like all contented animals, she has gone to sleep."

"Do you mean to call my baby an animal?" I asked in mock annoyance.

"Yes, can you deny it?" he answered, smiling. "All children are only animals when they are born. It is only after their eyes open to look into the great wells of mother love that they begin to grow souls."

"There, Karl," said Alice, "at last I believe it. Katharine has been trying to tell me that you were a poet, but somehow I could not make my idea of you measure up to it. But you certainly have paid Katharine and all the mothers of the world a very beautiful compliment."

"There is something about Katharine, Alice, that has always brought the best of me to the surface. From the very first night I met her, that night when John brought her home from the wedding trip and insisted upon showing her to us before she had a chance to doll up, until now, I have always found that even the thought of her has brought me up to a plane of high thinking which has surprised myself."

Karl seated himself beside my bed, as Alice came over and stood beside him, looking down at me.

"You're rather skinny, Katharine," she said, tantalizingly, "and your eyes look too big for your face. Your mouth seems distressingly full of teeth and that peaches and cream complexion which was the despair of every one of us, has faded for the time being. But, my dear, do not know that there is something undeniably about you that makes you more beautiful than ever."

"That's a nice compliment," I said, "and it will probably fortify me when I'm obliged to look in a mirror and see all the dirt wreckage that you have described."

"Yes," said Alice to Karl, just as though I were not there, "I've come to the realization of that indescribable thing which we call charm."

"Charm?" said Karl also ignoring me. "Why, Alice, surely you have always known that a woman's charm is her sweetness and goodness."

"Huh!" said Alice contemptuously. "I know nothing of the sort, Karl Shepard, for some of the women that I have known to look in a mirror and see all the dirt wreckage that you have described, have been neither sweet nor good."

"No one can define or explain the word 'charm' when it is applied to a woman, in fact, many of us have known women whose charm for one person would be nil and for another superlative."

"Poor Elizabeth," said Alice with a sigh.

"Yes, I, too, was thinking of Elizabeth," said Karl.

"For most men, I know that Elizabeth Moreland had great charm, for me she had none."

"I felt that I could not ignore these two dear friends by keeping silent; I could not pretend to them who knew my life like an open book, that there had been nothing between John and Elizabeth and that the tragedy of my life was not their deaths, but their lives, their living and their loving."

"I sometimes think," I said, "that after all Elizabeth was the woman that John should have married and I am not sure even now, that she was not the woman he loved the more, and could have made him happiest."

"But you, my dear," said Karl, bending over me, "were the woman who could have made him live the life he should live."

Tomorrow---Plans for the Future.

Told in the Twilight

(Continued From Page Three.) Mrs. J. F. Rowland, University avenue, asked a few of Miss Mary Rowland's boy and girl friends to come in on Monday evening for a little dance as a sort of farewell to the summer holidays that have passed all too quickly for the school pupils.

Miss French, Buffalo, Mrs. Owen, Syracuse, and Mrs. Gallagher, Kingston, are guests of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Foster, Picton.

Miss Loree Seward, Toledo, is visiting relatives near Kingston.

Miss Fannie Latham, Kingston, and Master Wallace Latham, Brockville, are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. George Stewart, at Granite Lodge Farm, Lyn.

Mrs. S. H. J. Reid and family have returned to Bradford, after spending the summer weeks on Lake Erie, near Crystal Beach.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Porter, Kingston, and Mr. and Mrs. F. F. Brown, Farnham, Que., are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Dier, Westport.

Mrs. M. M. Fraser, Mrs. Jas. McShane, Mrs. D. Blair and Mrs. F. W.

Scott, Westport, were visitors in Kingston last week.

Mrs. S. E. Campbell, Albert street, who is one of the directors of the Graduate Nurses Association of Ontario, went up to Toronto for the directors' meeting held there on Saturday.

The question of the registration of graduate nurses was the principal business to be transacted. Miss Eleanor Creighton left on Monday for Ottawa, where she will make her home, much to the regret of her many Kingston friends, by whom she will be much missed.

Mrs. W. A. Sawyer and Miss Marlon Sawyer, University avenue, have returned from visits to Mrs. McKee, Peterboro, and Mr. and Mrs. O. A. Sawyer, at their cottage at Trent Bridge.

Mr. Anderson, Bank of Nova Scotia, left for Winchester on Saturday to spend his holidays.

Mr. and Mrs. Noel Gill and their son, Linton, have returned from their camp at Trent River, and are settled in their new house, 8 Aberdeen street.

Dr. and Mrs. G. W. Mylks and their family came up this week from their cottage at East View.

Miss Eva Martin, Clergy street, spent the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Mudie, Gt. Manogue.

The Dean of Ontario returned on Saturday from a visit to relatives in the Adirondacks and a motor trip through the White Mountains.

E. H. Pense, Wales, spent the week-end in town.

Mrs. W. B. Carey and Travers Carey have returned from their camp on the St. Lawrence.

Mrs. R. Cannon Stephens, Wellington street, has returned from a trip to St. Mary's and Toronto.

R. H. Partridge, who came down from Toronto on Saturday, bringing Master Bobbie with him, spent the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. R. Easton Burns, Frontenac street.

Miss Bernice Yeomans left on Tuesday last to attend Albert College, Belleville.

Mrs. Chas. Clark, Keelerville, is spending a week with her friend, Mrs. R. J. Stanley, Brewer's Mills.

Mrs. W. G. Birmingham and children, Rowal and Betty, Division street, have returned after a pleasant visit in Cornwall.

Miss Katie Wilson, Kingston, staying with her cousins, the Misses Murray, Niagara Falls, is now visiting Miss Temple, in Chicora avenue, Toronto.

The engagement is announced of Vera, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Nuttall, South Lake, to Stanley T. Clendenning, Eden Grove. The marriage will take place early in September.

The marriage of Miss Hilda Ward Merrett, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. E. Merrett, Montreal, to Major Frank Stanton Mathewson, D. S. O., son of the late Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Mathewson, will take place on Oct. 24.

NUXATED IRON

Dr. Ferdinand Kies, New York Physician and Medical Author, says "It is my opinion that in general, the only way to increase strength and vitality is to increase the amount of iron in the system. Iron is the life-giving element, and it is the only element that can be taken in such a form as to be absorbed by the system. Nuxated Iron is the only iron preparation that is so pure and so easily absorbed that it can be taken in such a form as to be absorbed by the system. It is the only iron preparation that is so pure and so easily absorbed that it can be taken in such a form as to be absorbed by the system."
