Sicilian Estates---Picturesque Seenes Are Enacted in Palermo.

Palermo, Sicily, Oct. 6 .- Thousands of armed men have invaded the large estates of almost the entire island, which is still held in practically feudal condition by the barons. These absentee landlords, whose properties, though not well cultivated usually yield immense profits, spend most of their time and money in Naples, Rome, Paris and

Didn't Trust the Banks, Footpads Get His Roll

London, Ont., Oct. 6. - George Morse, an aged man residing on Wyatt street, West London, reported to the police that two highwaymen held him up at midnight as he was nearing his home and made him hand over his roll of $650. Morse, who is a deaf mute, had been warned by his friends not to carry his savings of years on his person, but he would not trust the money to a bank. When the robbers held him up he had the cash in his hip pocket. The police believe that the men who committed the robbery were well aware of the fact that he carried his savings with

A LAND OF ROMANCE.

Brittany Is Filled With Traditions and Charm.

Opposite the Seven Islands on the extreme north of the coast of Brittany loom the huge red granite rocks of the promontery of the Ploumanac's, a relic of the Tertiary age, some call it, or of some dim period when chaos ruled the world. No tree, only wind-swept stubble, may take root on those cliffs. A spot of wild and awful beauty, to some it is the "chaos of Ploumanach," a "territory so savage, a desert, yet more terrible in its character of desolation than any desert could be." But others speak of its grandeur, of the intense blue of the surrounding waters, smooth as a lake; of the

On the knoll of one of the granite cliffs stands the little stone chapel must at least be honored as a pioneer missionary, for it was only the year 547, the Celtic legend has it, that he sailed over from England. In the curred. Three hundred horsemen manner of his passage, St. Guirec is said to have followed the fashion of saints of the day; he crossed on a ment of the miraculous, which was

For it is to this shrine that the maidens of the countryside wend their way, there to pray to their patron, St. Guirec, for husbands. As part of the ritual of such supplicaions, each maiden must stick a pin point in the statute of the saint. Millions of faint indentations cover the here and there the evidence of some very vicious little digs indeed.

The little Breton village of La Clarte also houses an ancient chapel, struck the scow, which filled with that of Notre Dame de la Clarte. Dim water, and it sank at once.
