

ANOTHER VICTIM OF RHEUMATISM

Entirely Well After Six Weeks' Treatment With "FRUIT-A-TIVES"

MR. AMEDEE GARCEAU 32 Hickory St., Ottawa, Ont.

"I was for many years a victim of that terrible disease, Rheumatism. In 1913, I was laid up for four months with Rheumatism in the joints of the knees, hips and shoulders and was prevented from following my work, that of Electrician."

I tried many remedies and was under the care of a physician; but nothing did me any good. Then I began to take 'Fruit-a-tives' and in a week I was easier, and in six weeks I was so well I went to work again."

I look upon this fruit medicine, 'Fruit-a-tives', as simply marvellous in the cure of Rheumatism, and strongly advise everyone suffering with Rheumatism to give 'Fruit-a-tives' a trial."

SALTS IF BACKACHE AND KIDNEYS HURT

Stop Eating Meat For a While if Your Bladder is Troubling You

When you wake up with backache and dull misery in the kidney region it generally means you have been eating too much meat, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which overworks the kidneys in their effort to filter it from the blood and they become sort of paralyzed and loggy. When your kidneys get sluggish and clog you must relieve them, like you relieve your bowels; removing all the body's urinous waste, else you have backache, sick headache, dizzy spells; your stomach sour, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment, channels often get sore, water scalds and you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night.

Either consult a good, reliable physician at once or get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then set fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness. Jad Salts is a life saver for regular meat eaters. It is inexpensive, cannot injure and makes a delightful, effervescent lithia-water drink.

Fifty years ago the consumption of paper collars in the United States amounted to 225,000,000 a year.

Books And Their Authors

THE GREAT LEVIATHAN.

By D. A. Barker, Ryerson Press, Toronto. Price $2.00.

The hero of the book, Tom Seton, is introduced while still a child and his training, surroundings and ideas placed before the reader. From a rather quiet boy he develops into an exceedingly active idealist, with large ideas of conquering the world and revolutionizing everything in the space of a very short time. Needless to say, he did not succeed in making the old world very much different, but he made himself much different and acquired a considerable amount of valuable experience during the bumpy period. It is really the same old story of the ambitions and dreams of a boy, but it is told in a way that gives it a new charm. The narrative does not drag for an instant.

In the end Tom Seton meets with failure in the pursuit of his mighty and, of course, impossible aims, but he survives the failure as most young men do. The story is there but the book does not depend on the plot of the year alone. The author, who seems unfamiliar by name, has a remarkable way of advancing many quaint and true philosophies about life in general and boys in particular without robbing the story of any of its interest or attractiveness to the average reader. It is a wonderful start for a new novelist.

YELLOW SOAP.

By Katharine Haviland Taylor, published by Doubleday, Page & Co., New York. Price $1.75 net.

This is a book of great originality in which the author shows a remarkable knowledge of human nature. The characters are drawn with vividness, the style is particularly pleasing, and the interest of the reader is sustained throughout. The delightful romance which touches the life of Della Riggs' son, at every point of his varied life from tramp to wealth is charmingly told. Della Riggs is herself the charm of the book—the woman whose ambition was to make her son a gent and who felt the compulsion in death that she could say, "I gotta die like the mother of a gent," is a character sketch that is drawn with inimitable skill.

The book will repay the reader as few of the deluge of this year's novels can hope to do.

ONE AFTER ANOTHER.

By Stacy Aumonier, The Macmillan Company, Toronto. Price $2.25.

From the ages of ten and thirteen the author traces the lives of Tom Purbeck and his older sister through the course of their experiences in this world, through their early loves and hates, through married life and into old age and the joy of being grandparents. The father of the two was English, the mother, dead and followed by a stepmother, a Spaniard. Their home was in part of the public-house run by the father, the ordinary squalid den which the name usually conveys, but a respectable and money-making place of refreshment of some considerable size. Tom, the boy, tells the story and is acquainted with every part of it on account of his intimacy with his sister, Laura. The way in which the ancestry and habits of their parents shaped the actions of their lives, and, in turn, the lives of their children, is clearly shown and gives the book its title, "One After Another."

The reasoning and thoughts of Tom are amusing and interesting. Very cleverly the writer shows the change in his attitude and ideas with the change in his age, surroundings and associates. His philosophies and ideas crop out all over the story and are certainly worth reading. One of the first of these which stands out prominently is his discovery that he understood women, a conclusion brought about when he watched the actions of his sister in connection with throwing flies into the web of a voracious old spider. Later in the narrative he changed his conclusion several times which is not so extraordinary, but is interesting because it is human. We all want to read something that we can understand and sympathize with, not what is beyond our ken.

We have here a very engrossing narrative in this book with a style which holds the reader to the end.

DEAD MEN'S MONEY.

By J. S. Fletcher, The Macmillan Company, Toronto. Price $2.25.

This is a very engrossing mystery story which at times merges into double identities and two or three names for each person. It is the old plot of the impostor in the place of the rightful heir to some estate and title, the mystery surrounding his occupations for pass- ing enough to bring shudders, and on the whole it is a stirring tale of dark plots.

For the person who likes the mystery and murder yarn it is an ideal book. There are, however, a few too many of these dark and desperate stories. They are suitable for passing an idle hour in search of thrills, or perhaps as an aid to a study of the method of criminals, but they accomplish no general good. They do not brighten the heart nor bring peace for a few hours. In many cases they bring up a state of nervous apprehension which lasts for some time and is frequently injurious to the reader. But this has nothing to do with "Dead Men's Money," as a single instance. The reader will find himself drawn by the clever plot of the book and will be bound to finish it in spite of the nervous apprehension.

October Rod and Gun. Teeming with interest to all who have heard the Red Gods calling, rod and gun in Canada for October will especially appeal to followers of the trap-line. The leading story in this splendid issue of Canada's premier sportsmen's monthly is entitled, "An Imickiwash Lake." Illustrated with six pages of photographs taken right on the trap-line by F. V. Williams, it will appeal to everyone who ever had dreams of capturing the many fur-bearers which go to make Canada the richest in wild life. George R. Belton tells in his own intimate manner how he has been mistaken for several kinds of wild animals. His story will be read with interest. The usual contributors, Bonnycastle Dale,

Robert Page Lincoln, etc., need no introduction to the sportsmen of North America. In addition to the regular departments this month, M. U. Bates takes charge of the Trap Line Department and will conduct it in the usual interesting manner. Rod and Gun in Canada is published monthly by W. J. Taylor, Limited, Woodstock, Ont.

Notes of Interest to Booklovers.

An unusual fate has befallen a mystery story by Edgar Wallace, called "The Fourth Man" which is listed for early publication in the United States by Small, Maynard & Co. It has already appeared in England, and the Sinn Feiners have seized upon it as a sort of textbook.

In every raid copies of it have been found, much to the bewilderment of the author, who has written to the English press that he had not supposed the book to have any political significance whatever, and that his only object in writing it was to produce an interesting mystery story. Mr. Wallace has served as a private soldier in the British Army in Africa, has globe-trotted as a special correspondent, has had the editorial direction of an English society journal, and has contributed short stories to American magazines. He is now making a visit to this country.

"A Book of Boyhoods," by Miss E. M. Freyer, which E. P. Dutton & Co. will have ready within a week or two, will contain the stories of the boyhood years of nearly thirty of the men who have shaped the history of their times, from Chaucer to the American musician Edward MacDowell. Included in it are Washington, Burns, Leonardo da Vinci, La Salle, Foch, Rodin, Stevenson.

For immediate publication Alfred A. Knopf has "John Murray IV," written by John Murray IV, the famous London publisher, who thus portrays the life and career of his father. The elder Murray was the friend of Livingstone, Metternich, Gladstone, Du Chailu, Froude, Lecky and others of great achievement and importance during the Victorian epoch.

When William McPee, whose new novel Doubleday, Page & Co. will publish this fall, returns from his present trip as chief engineer of the United Fruit steamer Furrutaba, it will be to find awaiting for him another chapter of an international romance quite as exciting and colorful as any he has ever written. It began during the World War when he met in Smyrna Miss. Pauline Kladoff, a Bulgarian of part Italian extraction, and won her promise on the first day of their acquaintance to marry him at once and go to America. But he was serving on a British transport and she was an enemy subject, and so marriage had to be deferred until the end of the war. Finally, after months of effort and long waiting, she succeeded in getting a passport from the Greek Government after trying many others. Almost a month was then consumed in the journey to New York, where she is now awaiting Mr. McPee's return.

For August publication the Scribners announce a novel by Gordon Hall Gerould, whose wife is Katharine Fullerton Gerould, well known by her fiction and essays. It will bear the title, "Youth in Harley" and will deal with the experiences of a young college man in a New England village, whether he went to teach.
