QUEEN'S RUGBY CHANCES ON "FIRE PREVENTION"

Will They Have Any Chance to Pull Out Victors To-day?

In the Intercollegiate Rugby Union the uncertain quantity is almost always the team from the Limestone city. The teams at Montreal and Toronto are closely watched by thousands and commented on by dozens of papers. Every stage in their training and progress is noted, the histories of the players looked up, and they are generally the centre of attraction from the first of September until the first game of the series. As for Queen's, there are rumours around that they are doing this or that, but no paper or rugby critic, with the exception perhaps of the most intimate officials of their own team, knows just how they are playing and where they stand. They are the uncertain quantity. Even the students of the university, itself, hesitate to form or express an opinion until after the first game.

Last year Queen's put on the rugby field a collection of athletes which would be hard to equal, boys who knew the game, big, husky chaps, fellows who had played football before. They had the weight, the speed and the horse-sense, and yet they were defeated at every turn. They were the only team last year to cross McGill's goal line, but they got nothing for their pains. There must have been some reason for this state of affairs.

In the first place Queen's had a coach last year who knew the game from beginning to end. He had played with Queen's himself and was for many years a back man and captain with the Ottawa Rough Riders. He came of a football family and his brother was one of the greatest punters ever in the game. But "Jack" trusted to the discretion and honesty of the players too much. He did not emphasize himself enough in the management of the team. He was a big brother with lots of good advice, not a boss. A boss is what is needed.

Then, too, the coach last year was fighting against defeat before he had a squad at practices. The other runners in the intercollegiate races had a start on him of nearly a month. They had equipment, training quarters, trainers, everything to make their season a success. "Jack" Williams had none of these things behind him and could not hope to win as a consequence.

This year Queen's are away with dozens of improvements. They had a fairly early start, they have training quarters, they have a wonderful trainer, a training table, and a man who should be a good coach if anyone should be. It is necessary that they win this time. It is no case of "do our best," there is no excuse for failure. Queen's must either win outright or give their opponents such a run for the championship that there will not be much difference in the standing when the year is over.

Chief Armstrong Gives Timely Advice to Scholars—Hold Fire Drill.

On Friday afternoon, Fire Chief James Armstrong made a tour of the public and separate schools in the city, and gave the pupils a timely address on "Fire Prevention." While at the schools he also turned in a fire alarm, to see how quickly the pupils could turn out, and the results were most gratifying. At Victoria school, the largest in the city, with four hundred pupils, the school was emptied in two minutes and ten seconds, while at the Depot school, where there are about thirty scholars, everyone was out in ten seconds. At St. John's school the pupils made similar time.

In his address to the children, Chief Armstrong pointed out how many fires were due to carelessness, and appealed to the children to use every precaution to avoid having a fire. He warned them about the danger of playing with matches, lighting bon fires, and many other things that might cause a fire.

Chief Armstrong will address the Girl Guides of the Collegiate Institute on Wednesday next. Following the usual custom, the Ontario Fire Prevention League is awarding medals for the best essay on "Fire Prevention in the Home and Factory," in the collegiate institutes, public schools and universities. The competition is open till November 1st and Kingston pupils will take part. Last year in this competition Kingston scholars won medals and the essays were of a very high order.

KINDLY TRIBUTES PAID To the Memory of the Late Mrs. J. de Pencier Wright.

A memorial service was conducted in St. Luke's church after the funeral of the late Mrs. J. de P. Wright on Friday afternoon. The church was crowded to the doors by members of the congregation and other friends of the deceased, whose kindly interest and sympathy won for her a warm place in the regard of all with whom she had at any time been associated, whether in church circles where her many estimable qualities were highly appreciated, or in social matters that won her warm attachment at all times. Tender sympathy was shown, too, in the profuse decoration of the church with flowers. The chancel and altar were banked with beautiful floral tributes and the pew which Mrs. Wright had occupied bore evidence of loving remembrance.

The service was conducted by Dean Starr, assisted by Archdeacon O. G. Dobbs, and Canon J. W. Jones. The choir sang "Thy Will Be Done," "I Hear Thy Voice, Jesus Say," and "Peace Perfect Peace." Mrs. Horton soprano, sang "Crossing the Bar." Dean Starr gave a brief address, expressing the sympathy of the clergy and the people with the bereaved husband, Rev. J. de P. Wright and the family, and directed attention to Christ as an example for Christian faith in such a calamity. To the deceased it meant rest, gain and victory in Jesus Christ, and to the bereaved triumph in the hour of adversity and sorrow.

Died at Hamilton.

Following a week's illness, William Hill, a highly respected and well known resident, builder, and contractor of Hamilton, died at his late residence, 177 Duke street, aged 55 years. He had been prominently identified with the work of Stanley avenue Baptist church, of which he was a member of the trustee board. Mr. Hill belonged to Electric Lodge, A. F. & A. M. He is survived by his widow, one son, Melvin G., at home; one daughter, Miss Mildred, at home; and an adopted daughter, Mrs. Joseph Hodkin; also two brothers, Thomas, of Welland, and James, of this city, who attended the funeral. The burial took place on Tuesday afternoon to Hamilton cemetery.

Of Vast Importance.

That the Cape Vincent breakwater is of vast importance to the shipping interests of the St. Lawrence river was demonstrated on Friday last when eighteen large vessels were tied up to that structure to escape the severe storm that raged on the lake and river. This is the largest number of boats that have moored at the breakwater at any one time during the season.

AT THE GRAND TO-NIGHT

The Last Performance of the Hawaiian Singers and Dancers. Miss Mildred Leo Clemens, and her company of singers and dancers, entertained another large audience at the Grand Opera House last night, while Miss Clemens captivated her audience with her story about the beautiful island in the Pacific. The moving pictures taken on the island have created a great deal of interest. Miss Clemens certainly has a fine collection of views. The singing and playing of the six members of the company, three men and three women, is of a very high order. Last night every number was warmly encored.

The company played to a big audience at to-day's matinee and tonight the company will give its final presentation.
