Coming to the Grand.

Olive Thomas in "Out Yonder," a Selznick picture, will be one of the attractive features in the programme at the Grand Opera House next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. The scenes are all laid in and around and around a lighthouse, on a reef and a nearby yacht. Ralph Ince is the director and is said to have provided many thrills in these picturesque surroundings by the sea. The star appears as the daughter of a lighthouse superintendent who secretly grieves as he believes he has killed a man many years previously. His assistant had been an eyewitness of the struggle and holds it over the heroic father that he may obtain the daughter as his wife. She here on a nearby yacht loves the girl, but learns that his father was the man her father had killed. When the assistant is finally trapped he confesses that he, and not the father, was the real murderer. Olive Thomas has a role of a woman who receives pictures and many opportunities for splendid acting. There will be another extra good five reel feature, and special reels of comedies and other interesting subjects, as well as a splendid musical programme of the latest selections by the Grand's Orchestra. This bill will be seen Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday only.—Adv.

"San Toy" Coming.

F. Stuart Whyte's latest English importation of musical comedy "San Toy" will be the featured picture at the Grand Opera House for two nights commencing Friday, Oct. 15th, with a special matinee on Saturday. While the story of San Toy is familiar to most of us a short resume of the plot may be found interesting. Yen How, a mandarin of the first Reich, has a daughter, San Toy, famed for her beauty and accomplishments. The Emperor having heard of this, orders San Toy sent to Peking to be enrolled in the court body guard which is composed of a band of beautiful women. Yen How having other aspirations for his daughter disguises her as a boy and sends word to the Emperor that he has been mistaken as San Toy is a son not a daughter.

Yen How departs on a political mission leaving San Toy in the care of Sir Bingo Preston, an English officer, Sir Bingo's son Bobbie teaches her English and also falls in love with her, proposes and is accepted. Fo Hop, a Chinese student, also loves San Toy and is also desirous of marrying her. When he finds that she has accepted Bobbie he vows vengeance. Yen How returns to claim his daughter and as a return courtesy has asked Sir Bingo Preston to attend the full-moon feast which the mandarins are preparing to celebrate. Preston accepts with thanks. Meanwhile a message arriving from Peking with dispatches from the Emperor to Yen How disrupts the festivities. The Emperor has found out that San Toy is a girl and orders Yen How to send her to Peking at once under pain of being cut in one thousand pieces if he refuses. Being wise unto his generation Yen How decides to send his daughter. The secretary Li has already gone to see the Emperor to further substantiate Yen How's claim that San Toy is a boy. San Toy, travelling by a shorter route, arrives in Peking first, and when Li arrives with the batch of lies the Emperor is so angry with his futile attempt to deceive that he is condemned to die at Cockcrow to atone for his falsehood. Li anxious to escape is helped by Dudley the English maid to elude the guards and make good his escape.

Li believes the maid to be an English society lady, and offers her his heart and hand which she accepts. The Emperor being somewhat of a match maker himself, bestows San Toy on Bobbie and sanctions the marriage of Li and Dudley, and a further proof that he is no piker Yen How is made Vice-Roy thus bringing the musical comedy to the usual happy ending. The musical numbers in San Toy are very catchy.—Adv.

At The Strand.

For several weeks recently the highest paid chauffeur in America was Robert Warwick, the motion picture star. He is appearing in a new photoplay, "The City of Masks," on view at the Strand Theatre, next Monday, and the role required him to pose as a chauffeur who is really a nobleman under his camouflage. Incidentally, Mr. Warwick learned some things about chauffeurage. "Sitting comfortably in the back seat of a machine while a chauffeur drives, you don't notice the predicaments which the dense traffic puts him in and the nervous strain he's under. You're not aware of him out when he strikes a rut or swings too sharply. I used to be that way, too. But never again. I've seen the things from the chauffeur's viewpoint. And, if ever I get grouchy over bumps or urge a chauffeur to travel at higher speed through traffic, I want somebody to whisper 'The City of Masks' to me and I'll subside."—Adv.

At Griffin's.

To-night will be the last chance to see Pauline Frederick in "Bonds of Love," her newest picture which has been pleasing large audiences at this theatre during the past two days. "Bonds of Love" is an exceptionally strong story and gives this splendid star an opportunity to display her great dramatic talents in a superb manner. Don't miss it this evening, also the remainder of a meritorious programme which includes the seventh episode of "Bound and Gagged," and a Chas. Chaplin Comedy, "The Floor Walker."

For Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday Griffin's patrons will have an opportunity to see a very unusual picture. It is entitled "Shipwrecked Among Cannibals." Never before have there been pictures like these—absolutely real and true yet surpassing in drama the wildest fiction of scenario writers.

Six reels of almost unbelievable pictures made at the bottom of the world—in the island God forgot. Here is seen humanity at its lowest ebb. Where women slash their bodies to seem beautiful—where men torture their faces out of all human semblance to make them appear ferocious. View these most dramatic of all real life pictures ever taken since the world began. They are pictures that you'll never forget. Remember Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday at Griffin's.—Adv.

COMMITTEE NAMED

To Administer the Mothers' Pensions in Kingston.
The local committee for the Mothers' Pension Commission has been named: Mrs. Bruce Taylor, convenor; Mrs. Esson, Miss Ida Roman, Aid. C. J. Graham, and Capt. Fairful. The first committee meeting will be held on Friday at 7 p.m. when the officers will be selected and other organization matters settled. At 8 p.m. there will be an address in the City hall by Mrs. Adam Shortt, of Ottawa, the vice-chairman of the Commission, for the province. The public are cordially invited to this meeting when the aims and provisions of the act will be explained.

The local committee have already received a large number of applications for aid. It is pointed out that women who have been deserted by their husbands are not eligible for assistance. Judging from the numbers of applications that have been received at different points in the province, it is expected that about a million dollars will be required during the first year of the commission's operations. It is a most useful and necessary work and the provincial government is to be credited for its humanitarian motives. An able and energetic local commission has been selected, thus guaranteeing that the local work of the commission will be efficiently carried out.

Picking A Winner.
"Charlie, dear," said young Mrs. Torkins. "I am glad to see you taking as much interest in politics as you formerly took in racing."
"It is the duty of every man and woman to take an interest in politics."
"Do you wish me to vote for the same candidate that you do?"
"Why shouldn't you?"
"I thought it might be a good idea for me to have a satisfaction to feel that one or the other of us has at last succeeded in picking a winner."

Mrs. J. J. Warren, R. R. No. 1, Caintown, shows eight potatoes with a combined weight of fourteen pounds and one ounce, and one potato weighing two and three-quarter pounds.
