SLAVES BURIED

NEAR TO BATH An Interesting Article From the Pen of Justice Riddell.

In: an interesting article on Slaves in Canada," by Justice Riddell, are these references to Kingston owners:

It is possible that the eastern part of the province was the home of a negro who, at the age of 101 appeared at the assize court at Ottawa in 1867 to give evidence. He was born in the colony of New York in 1766, had been brought to Upper Canada by his master, a United Empire Loyalist, had fought through the war of 1812 on the British side, was present at the batties of Chippawa and Lundy's Lane, Try us for your next Suit or Overcont. and was wounded at Sackett's Harbor. In the Midland district at Our own personal attention is given Kingston such leading families as the Cartwrights, Herkimers and Everetts were slave owners. Farther west, the Ruttans, Bogarts, Van Alstynes, Petersons, Allens, Clarks, Bowers, Thompsons, Meyers, Spencers, Perrys, Pruyns-speaking generally, all the people of substance had their slaves. Mrs. T. W. Hallam, B.A., in an sideboard, extension table, dining interesting paper read before the Women's Historical Society of Tobeds, springs, dressers, Gurney Oxford ronto, and published in the Canaheater, hydraulic washing machine; dian Churchman, May 8th, 1919, kitchen cabinet; 3 burner oil range with has the following: "There is an old orchard between Collin's Bay and Bath, Ont., now used as a garden; which belongs to the Fairfield family. The children of this Loyalist family brought the seeds in their pockets from the old home in Vermont, and here lies buried the slaves belonging to the Fairfield Notice is hereby given that Rosetta and Pruyn families. On the way-Hood, of the City of Ottawa, in the over they milked the cows, which county of Carleton, in the Province of were brought with them, and sometimes the milk was the only food for a Bill of Divorce from her hus- which they had. The old Fairfield band, Alexander Hood, teamster, of the homestead, built in 1793, is still standing, but the negro quarters are unused, for, as those who live there Ontario, this 17th day of August, A.D. say, 'On a hot day you would declare the slaves were still there."

In a paper the late J. C. Hamilton, a barrister of Toronto, says ander Campbell had favored him with a note concerning slaves at Kingston which concluded: "I had personally known two slaves in Canada: one belonging to the Cartwright and the other to the Forsyth family. When I remember them in their old age, each had a cottage, surrounded by many comforts, on the family property of his master, and was the envy of all the old people in the neighborhood."

MENACE TO MORAL

Marriage Annulments by the Quebec Courts Again __ Denounced.

Winnipeg, Oct. 20.-The annulment of mixed marriages by the courts of Quebec was denounced as "illegal and contrary to the rights of the Canadian people," and "a menace to the moral life of the nation,' in a resolution adopted yesterday by the Council for Social Service of the Church of England in Canada.

The council protested against any extension of the present grounds for divorce, while favoring the amendment of present legislation dealing with judical operations "in such a way as more effectively to protect the PHOTOPLAYS AND MUNC. wonged party from unfair and unjust treatment."

' The officers of the council as elected are: President, the Primate Archbishop Matheson, chairman of the executive committee, the Bishop of Toronto; vice-chairman, the Bishop of Ontario; hon. treasurer, F. W. Mc-Whinney; recording secretary, Archdeacon Inglis.
