DEATH HOVERS OVER WEE KIDDIE AT PLAY

Three-year-old hides in Leaves in Path of Locomotive. Lindsay, Oct. 21.—Death hovered over a tiny three-year-old girl at play on the Victoria avenue railway tracks here Monday. A Grand Trunk train, carrying a heavy train of cars, was approaching and the child was in its path. She was lying on her back, completely hidden from the train. The engineer Hutchinson entered the town with a long string of freight cars. Leaning from his cab window he saw the heads of leaves covering the tracks and the children playing alongside. Proceeding slowly, the pilot of his engine had almost reached the leafy heap when the tiny girl popped up from her hiding place. With screaming brake shoes and a grinding shudder the heavy train came to a stop within inches of the little one.

About the first thing a child learns in this strenuous old world is how not to behave. The man who imagines he never did a foolish act isn't wise enough to know what folly is.
