Maude Adams and Kenneth Harlan in "The Penalty"

Stage Star On Screen—This Star a Painter—Ran Away From Home—Heroine of Bride 13—"The Penalty"—A Texas Beauty.

MISS CALVERT will soon appear in a spectacular, all-star presentation of "Dead Men Tell No Tales," a screen version of the famous novel of the same name by E. W. Hornung, author of "Raffles," and other well-known stories of intrigue and adventure.

Miss Calvert's stage career has consisted of one success tripping on the heels of the last. To mention just a few of her stage hits, she played leading roles in "Brown of Harvard," "Deep Purple," "Romance of the Underworld," and "The Escape." From the stage, her entrance into the silent drama was to be expected and her remarkable triumph on the screen more than fulfilled expectations aroused by her previous work.

Although the public is probably unaware of it—especially the feminine public—there are all kinds of possibilities for fame in a haircomb. We have an authority for this statement none other than Miriam Cooper, one of filmdom's best known players. According to Miss Cooper, many girls with screen aspirations have failed to get the coveted opportunity they sought because they did not comb their hair properly; and many others who have succeeded in getting to the "extra" and "bit" stage in the picture world have failed to climb to the top for the same reason.

"Some directors claim that unless a girl has a coiffure that will screen well, her opportunities for film fame are greatly curtailed. So as a consequence, it is very essential that in addition to genuine histrionic ability, a feminine photoplayer must also have a camera coiffure."

States Navy are enthusiastic picture patrons. Therefore the appearance of the company at Newport to begin "shooting" the serial "Bride 13" with the cordial co-operation of the Navy was a welcome interlude for the sea fighters.

Hope Hampton
Hope Hampton, the young Texas beauty, first came into prominence as the winner of a state-wide newspaper beauty contest. Immediately she was beset with contracts for stage and screen work, which she wisely refused to sign until she had taken further training in these lines. "A Modern Salome," one of her best productions is based on the famous dramatic poem "Salome" by Oscar Wilde. Her latest play is "The Tiger Lady."

"The Penalty"
"Art and science fail to agree in this scene from 'The Penalty' by Gouverneur Morris. Young Doctor Wilmont (Kenneth Harlan), trying to prevail upon Barbara (Maude Adams), to give up her artistic effort and become his wife. But art is not so easily set aside and Barbara has a will of her own so many things must happen before the doctor has his way. And they do happen with startling speed in this tale of the San Francisco underworld. The story is marked by a succession of surprises."

Nayimova's Beautiful Home
The brilliant Russian star is the mistress of a beautiful estate several miles out of Los Angeles, nestled among the foothills. Her residence is a handsome stucco and Spanish tile building of two stories; more roomy than the justly famed California bungalow. Ivy and other clinging vines have worked a deft pattern in green on the stucco walls.

Miss Cooper claims to have discovered the three most effective ways to dress the hair for the camera. She will use all three styles in her next production, in which she takes one of the principle roles. When it is released, feminine theatre patrons will be given the opportunity to see what constitutes the most effective head dress for the screen.

Miss Cooper's effective performance in "The Deep Purple," in which she played the part of a misguided country girl, won lavish praise from critics of the trade and public press, many of whom made it the subject of a favorable comparison with her notable performances in "The Birth of a Nation" and "Intolerance."

Edward Bosworth, featured player in "Behind the Door" and "Below the surface," both sea stories, knows life aboard ship as does no other motion picture actor. At the age of twelve he ran away from his home in Marietta, Ohio, and shipped on the "Boyarsin of the Seas," sailing from San Francisco, aboard which ship he served for three years. On his return from the long cruise he joined a stock company at the old California Theatre in San Francisco and later played in Shakespearean repertoire at the Alcazar Theatres in that city with Lewis Morrison and W. E. Morrison, appearing opposite Maude Adams, who was the ingenue in the company. In 1904 Mr. Bosworth was forced to go to Arizona for his health and during his sojourn there took up landscape painting. Regaining his strength he became director of the stock company at the Alcazar Theatre in Los Angeles, a position which he held for three years. It was in 1909 that he made his first screen appearance and since that time he has appeared as star and in important roles in hundreds of films, has written ninety odd plays and has directed more than a hundred.

Marguerite Clayton

Marguerite Clayton, leading woman in "Bride 13" is a combination of widely divergent qualities. Like the blonde heroines of the Icelandic sagas, she is equally fitted to make the home of peace and contentment and to defend it with courage and deeds of valor. "Beware of blue eyes and yellow locks when the battle is on!" When the pirate crew took over the job of abducting the thirteenth bride they found their hands full.

Marguerite Clayton can hardly remember herself as too young to dive and swim like a duck and to ride with the freedom of a Wild West cowgirl. On cattle ranges she rode in the round-up, and among the redwoods she camped and grew expert with the rifle. Always life in the open filled her with the greatest satisfaction. Woman's Hidden Hoard.
London, October 28.—In a New-castle house in which an old woman had hidden a hoard of £2,000 in gold, silver and notes was found.

The evil we do would not be so bad if it did not crucify those not responsible for it.

If you allow others to suffer from mistakes of your own making, you are a rank coward.
