"The Maid of the Mountains" Tonight

The greatest event in Canadian theatrical history is the importation direct from Daly's Theatre, London, Eng., of the world famous musical comedy, "The Maid of the Mountains," which comes to the Grand Opera House to-night. The story of "The Maid of the Mountains" possesses real dramatic interest and shows throughout the hand of a skillful constructor allied to that of a musical collaborator, who has very effectively reflected the story and its main incidents. The piece, with its fascinating and daring Gypsy heroine, never degenerates into a go-as-you-please show, and with its picturesque settings—in which one can trace the master hand of Mr. Oscar Asche—and presented, as it is, by an all-star company, strong in dramatic and vocal talent, should score a complete success on this side of the Atlantic, as it has in England. The cast includes Fred Wright as Tonio and Viva Baron as Teresa.—Advt.

"Jack O'Lantern" Coming.

Before they became actors, Doyle and Dixon, who come to the Grand Opera House, Monday, November 1st, for one night only, in Charles Dillingham's musical extravaganza, "Jack O'Lantern," were just plain, very-day boys, following the pursuits of millions of other American boys. Doyle was a book salesman, and Dixon was an elevator boy and bell hop. Even to-day the comedians could hardly compete with the great capitalists, but neither are they terribly upset over the H. C. L., which is causing so much consternation in so many directions throughout the country.

Mr. Dillingham's stars began their histrionic careers via minstrelsy, the school that produced many of the greatest stars of today. These dignified young men know what it means to don the spangled coat and high hat and "do" the noon-day parade; they know the art of the burnt cork and all the other tricks that go with that famous form of entertainment.

But Doyle and Dixon did not begin in the same show. They first met after they had graduated from the street parade and black-face circle to vaudeville. Like most teams on the stage, the association of these lancers and comedians came about as a result of an emergency and a chance acquaintance. Fate is a big factor in the theatre, and it must have been some unknown force that placed these boys on the same bill in a New York vaudeville theatre. The two made an immediate hit and then and there teamed up and have been together ever since.—Advt.

H. V. Esmond and Eva Moore. When the distinguished English comedian, H. V. Esmond and his wife, Miss Eva Moore, acknowledged as the leading comedienne of the English stage to-day, are seen here at the Grand Opera House, Tuesday and Wednesday, November 9th and 10th, with a special matinee on Wednesday

"The Law Divine." Mr. Esmond's latest and most successful comedy, "The Law Divine," will witness a performance which thrilled many thousands London people, where it ran for three years. Mr. Esmond's reputation as a playwright, who has dealt consistently and exclusively with the wholesome things of life, is world-wide. He has set his face steadfastly against everything that is unclean and unwholesome, and he has had his reward in the affection and loyal support of hundreds of thousands of English-speaking theatregoers. In "The Law Divine," Mr. Esmond has written a comedy which deals in a most entertaining and appealing manner with a problem which, though it arises directly out of the war, is in no sense a war problem. The entire action lies in the drawing rooms of London society, and the whole play breathes a fragrant atmosphere.

The production is in every detail the original, direct from Wyndham's theatre in London. The supporting company is the same as that which Mr. Esmond and Mrs. Moore gathered together in London, and the stage settings and properties are also identical. To see this play is to realize in one night the vast difference between the wholesome, healthy play that breathes the fragrance of clean-minded society and the play that depends for its appeal solely upon its suggestiveness. "The Law Divine" is a play to which you can take the whole family, and which you will leave feeling that you have seen something that has made you laugh and done you good.—Advt.

At Griffin's.

Tonight will be the last opportunity to see Clara Kimball Young in "The Eyes of Youth," in which the brilliant star is seen to wonderful advantage. The story is an unusually interesting one dealing with mysticism, and offers something new in photoplay entertainment. Some brilliant scenes are depicted throughout the story as it takes you through three different careers with the girl who looks in the crystal ball to decide her future. Clara Kimball Young was never more beautiful than in this production, and she wears some magnificent gowns. Be sure and see this picture together with the balance of our programme, which includes the final chapter of "Bound and Gagged," that interesting serial, in which George B. Seitz and Marguerite Courtot are co-starred. Several other interesting subjects are also on the programme including a Selected comedy.—Advt.

At The Strand.

Who said pretty motion picture actresses don't have to make sacrifices? Here's Ann Forrest, one of the real beauties of the screen, wearing rags and torn woolen stockings and a most disheveled head of riotous golden hair in "The Prince Chap," William De Mille's new production, at the Strand Theatre this evening. Miss Forrest has appeared as leading woman for many prominent stars. She was the heroine in the Houdini picture, "The Grim Game." In every case she has been a pleasant vision in exquisite costumes that represent the latest creations of the modistes' art. But in "The Prince Chap" she is a slavey around the poor artists' studios in the bohemian quarter of London. It is a tribute to Miss Forrest's personal charm that even in this ragged garb she is an appealing figure.—Advt.

Big Crowd to Attend The Queen's-McGill Game

Montreal, Oct. 30.—With the season's first fall of snow and practically no wind, to-day dawned crisp and cold for this afternoon's match between Queen's and McGill. The game promises to be one of the most exciting that has yet been played in the fight for the championship, for if McGill is defeated she will be out of the running. A crowd is expected to attend, for the line-up from McGill Union, where the tickets were being sold, stretched for over two blocks at the sale yesterday.

After They Had Made a Raid on Dalton's Wholesale Hardware.

For the second time within a very short period, burglars secured an entrance to Dalton's wholesale hardware, at the corner of Princess and Ontario streets, some time during Friday night. There was evidence to show that the burglars had made almost a complete round of the wholesale, and a quantity of goods were taken, including knives, flashlights, wrenches and other things, but the exact amount taken could not be ascertained.

The burglars went away from the building minus a dangerous looking sand bag, which they left on the premises. Entrance was secured to the building in a very simple manner. There is a small door on the princess street side of the store which is used by employees. The lock on this door was picked off, and then was a very easy matter to pick the inside portion of the lock with a small knife. In order to get into one of the upstairs rooms the burglars pulled a very heavy door off its hinges.

"FALL AND WINTER SPORTS"

A New Book on Knitting and Crocheting

A most remarkable knitting and crocheting book entitled "Fall and Winter Sports" has just been published by Belding-Corticeili, Limited, manufacturers of knitting yarns, crocheting and embroidery cottons, silk threads and ribbons, tapes and laces, needlecraft novelties and silk fabrics.

The experienced knitter as well as the woman who is learning to knit will find in "Fall and Winter Sports" a wealth of inspiration. The book is an artistic triumph. Illustrations are shown in color, so that the knitter can see just how the garment will look when finished. The color combinations in various garments are unusual in the extreme and very beautiful.

While designed primarily for out-of-door sports, many of the garments in this book are suitable for general wear, for instance, the attractive Spencer, sweaters, scarfs, stockings, etc.

All the articles shown in this book were designed and made exclusively for Belding-Corticeili, Limited. Nothing like them can be found anywhere else. The directions for knitting the automobile wrap are alone worth the price of the entire book. Then there will be found a very wonderful cape with a vest to match; a particularly fetching sports costume showing tam, sweater, scarf, skirt, stockings and gloves; Teddy Bear outfit for the kiddies; a complete sports suit for men—and many other equally attractive and unusual articles, each accompanied by very clear knitting directions.

The price of "Fall and Winter Sports" is 15c, which makes it easily accessible to every woman who desires distinctive knitted garments for herself and her family.
