EUROPE'S NEW MENACE

WHAT DEFEAT OF POLAND WOULD MEAN.

If Germany United With Russia Against Great Britain, France and the United States, It Would Mean a Much More Terrible War Than That Which Has Left Civilization Shattered.

THE people of this country do not seem to realize the importance and possibly serious consequences to themselves of the momentous issues which are being decided in the struggle between Poland and the Bolsheviks. If Poland is defeated in the present struggle, it is no exaggeration to say that conscription will have to be put into force again in the Old Country within the next three months, and Germany will tear the Peace Treaty to shreds.

Germany, at present smarting but not repentant under the pain of a half administered thrashing, is thirsting for revenge and seeking for the means to carry out in other directions her former ambitious schemes of world conquest. In short, she is hungering to gain, via Moscow, what she failed to gain via Berlin.

There were two outstanding causes which contributed to the defeat of Germany in the late war. The one was the fact that our navy was able to obtain a strategic hold over Germany by shutting out the supplies of raw material which she was so desperately in need of, and could not produce herself. The second was the scarcity of "cannon fodder." After nearly five years of fighting the man-power of Germany was not strong enough to stand the tremendous drain made upon it. Therefore Germany is seeking for ways and means to make good these two weak points before embarking on another struggle for world empire. She wants an unlimited supply of raw material, and she wants millions of human beings naturally brave and blindly obedient. Where is she to find them? She has found them. By dint of almost diabolically clever intrigues and propaganda she has turned what was her greatest danger into her greatest asset. Russia, her former greatest antagonist, is in the hands of German Jews, and the Bolshevik armies are being directed by German staff officers. Under German organization, Russia can be made to produce again all that is necessary for man's welfare and man's warfare, even platinum and cotton wool. With the economic wealth of Russia at the disposal of Germany could scout all fear of any blockade. The power of the British fleet would be rendered nugatory. With 122 millions of brave people lying to her hand, needing only organization and leadership, the question of Germany's supply of cannon-fodder would be settled.

There is, however, one great difficulty to be overcome before this great scheme can be carried out. Although at the present moment German staff officers are organizing and leading the Bolshevik armies; although German troops are already in Russia to such an extent that Col. John Ward told the House of Commons that in one of his many engagements with the Bolsheviks, among the 600 dead bodies of the enemy there was not a single Russian, every corpse being that either of a German, Austrian, or Hungarian, yet there is one great barrier between Germany and her intended Russian prey, and that is Poland. The territories of Poland separate Germany from Russia. Germany's plan is, therefore, obvious. It is to make Poland as weak as possible, and to stir up dissension among all the states which come in between Germany and her ambition. Finland, Estonia, Latvia, and Lithuania occupy the shores of the Baltic, which it is Germany's intention to dominate. During the war all these countries have been occupied by the Germans, so that each of these states realizes what German domination means, and each of these states is quite determined that Germany shall not have the control of their affairs again. Nevertheless, unless these states can come to some working agreement for mutual self-defence, it is difficult to see how they can help succumbing either to the intrigues of the Baltic barons aided by German pressure from East Prussia, or else to the Germanized Bolsheviks. It cannot be too distinctly remembered that if it had not been for M. Clemenceau and the Supreme Council, Poland might have made peace with the Bolsheviks last November. The Bolshevik offer of peace to Poland was forwarded to Paris by the Polish Government, and M. Clemenceau and the Supreme Council told the Poles to take no notice of Tschitcherine's letter. So that the Allies must assume part of the responsibility for Poland's present position. It may be that the great danger which Poland is in at present will induce all the Baltic states to drop their various differences and unite to face a common foe. The common danger may make them realize that they are in danger of forgetting in the heat of national quarrels and jealousies, namely, that if Poland forgets, they all fall. And "let us forget," let us remind ourselves more that if the Germans gain control of the Baltic we lose the greater part of our future trade with Russia and Scandinavia, and also that if the Polish barrier is broken by the Bolsheviks, Great Britain, together with the rest of Europe, will be involved in a gargantuan catastrophe. Then, perhaps, the workmen of Britain will regret, but too late, their treacherous and suicidal policy of hostility towards the small but brave Socialist Republic of Poland.

PROPHECIES CAME TRUE.

Strange Stories of Warnings Heeded and Unheeded.

It is recorded of the Empress Eugenie that once, when she was a child, and living with her mother in Madrid, she was sliding down the banisters one day when she lost her balance and, knocking her head violently against the open front-door leading to the street, fell senseless on the steps. An old gipsy woman who happened to be passing and down by the roadside, took the girl's head to her lap, and brought her back to consciousness.

"There is no danger," she said, to the little Eugenie's alarmed mother; "the senorita will live to be a hundred years old, either more or less, and she will be a queen."

The second part of the prophecy has certainly been fulfilled, and, in view of the fact that the aged empress was ninety-three when she died the first part of the gipsy prophecy was not very far wrong.

Draga Mashin, the beautiful woman of the people, who afterwards became the Queen of Serbia, and was assassinated with her husband, King Alexander, before her marriage, dame d'honneur to Queen Nathalie, the young king's mother. On one occasion, when, with her royal mistress, she was visiting Paris, she went to consult the famous Parisian clairvoyante, Mme. Thebes. After holding the young maid-of-honor's hand for a long time in silence, the clairvoyante looked gravely at her and said, hesitatingly: "You have great ambition; you will marry the highest personage in the country, but you will bring only ruin to your husband, and you yourself will perish with him."

King George I. of England was told by a fortune-teller, when he was a boy, that he should take care of his wife, "as he would only survive her a year." Whether he paid much heed to it is not known, but it is certainly a curious fact that, exactly twelve months after her death, he died, almost suddenly, while on a visit to his brother, the Prince Bishop, at Osnaburg.

In the year 1671 a woman soothsayer, Marguerite Marie, of Paray-le-Monial, prophesied to Louis XIV. that after the year 1793 no crowned ruler would ever die in his bed in France. The fateful year 1793, as everyone knows, proved to be the year of the murder of Louis XVI. and Marie Antoinette, and history has since shown that no crowned ruler of France, subsequent to that date, has died in his bed in the country. Louis XVIII, who did so, was reminded of this sinister prophecy just before his coronation was to take place, and, although most extravagant preparations had been made for it, he heeded the warning, and was never officially crowned!

The assassination of that great and wise monarch, Henry of Navarre, was foretold by an astrologer, who warned the king, some six months before the murder, that he should beware of the coming month of May, stating that he would be assassinated at the period of a grand solemnity, and that he would expire in a coach.

Precocity and Genius.
In every generation there have been precocious children. Socrates, Seneca, Horace and Confucius exhibited extraordinary abilities at very early ages. But perhaps in no other fields is the relation of genius to precocity so clearly exemplified as in music. At the age of four Mozart composed a number of minuets and other pieces still extant; Beethoven showed marked genius at five, and when only seven performed great astonishment by his performances on the violin, while Schubert, Mendelssohn, Handel, and other great composers, were precocious as children and astonished their contemporaries by their early performances. Saint-Saens is said to have produced creditable waltzes and galops at five. Modern eugenists account for precocity on the advanced age of one or both of the child's parents at the time of its birth, and we have very marked examples in the following whose father's ages at the time of the distinguished son's birth are given in each case. Voltaire sixty-five, Franklin fifty-seven, Audobon fifty-seven, Goethe fifty-three, Irving fifty-two, Bacon fifty-one, Shakespeare about forty-five, Milton forty-five, Confucius forty-five, Johnson forty-seven, Edison forty-three.

Jerusalem's Cobblers.
Jerusalem's large army of cobblers, who have been enjoying an undreamed of prosperity because the terrible condition of the streets has kept them busy repairing shoes, are beginning to worry over lean days ahead. With the British administration and the Zionist commission engaged in improving the streets of the Holy City the cobblers see future days of little to do compared to the golden harvest they are now reaping, according to the Palestine Weekly, a new English newspaper published in Jerusalem. With plans under way for the establishment of shoe factories capable of a large daily output, which will bring the prices down to a low level, combined with the smoothness the streets are now acquiring, the present opulent cobblers have reason to worry over the future, The Weekly chuckles.

The British Dominions.
Considering the fact that the United States has kept practically an open door for a century and more to all comers, and that millions of Germans, Scandinavians, Italians and others have settled in the land, it is surprising that only two Presidents have borne other than British surnames. These were both Dutch, Van Buren and Roosevelt.

Wiser to Go Elsewhere.

"The Woman's Store of Kingston."

WOMAN SOLD LIQUOR.
Mrs. Oliver Hemond Fined $500 and Sent to Jail.
Cornwall, Nov. 1.—The first instance of a woman being prosecuted in a Cornwall court for an infraction of the Ontario Temperance Act occurred, when Mrs. Oliver Hemond was fined $500 and sent to jail for fifteen days. If the fine is not paid within five days an additional two and a half months' imprisonment will be imposed.
The case arose out of a charge of intoxication laid against James Larue Dep. Magistrate Cline read the section of the act wherein it is stated that one so charged must divulge the source of supply or be imprisoned for three months, or until such time as the information is forthcoming. The accused then stated he had purchased the liquor at the Hemond home, from Mrs. Hemond.

The death occurred Thursday of a prominent resident of Prescott in Capt. Edward P. McCannan. He had been in poor health for a few weeks. Edward T. Smith, a Brockville grocer, passed away without warning at his residence on Friday. He had been ill some time.
