NO FURTHER ARRESTS OVER FUR ROBBERY

Two or Three Gangs of Burglars at Work in

Up till noon on Monday, there had een no further arrests made in the sensational fur robbery case of Geo.
Mills & Company. James D. Godkin, who was driving the auto run down by the police, and who was committed for trial by Magistrate Farrell, on Saturday morning, was taken to jail, following the session of the court, and it is understood that he will come up for trial at the December sessions to open on December 14th. As far as can be learned all the goods taken from the Mills for the goods taken from the Mills fur store have been recovered.

It is believed that two or three gangs of burglars are at work in the city. The fact that a man was seen on the roof of the buildings on Princess street, opposite St. Andrew's church, about 3 o'clock, on Monday morning, shows that one gang at least is still on the job, and that they are pretty bold in their work.

It is believed that the man working on the roof had one or more of his pals hidden some place, giving him the signals, and that in this way he was able to make his escape before the police arrived on the scene.

Robbers entered three Toronto hurches and stole mission money.
