Theatrical

At the Grand, Earl Williams, the talented star of Vitagraph pictures, will be seen at the Grand to-night in one of the best features he has ever produced, "When a Man Loves" is the title, and no better feature could be chosen for this star. The story is a delightful one, having a charming love story running through many thrilling scenes, and the splendid photography adds to this picture the touch that makes it distinctive. There is an extra attractive O. Henry two-reel picture, "Telema-chus Friend" that is unusual in that the ending is totally unexpected. There is also a special Big V comedy, entitled "Squeaks and Squawks," with Jimmy Aubrey in the leading role. The Grand's orchestra have arranged a special musical programme of the latest popular and operatic selections, and the entire bill will be seen for to-night only. -Adv.

"The Law Divide." Following the phenomenal success achieved by the all-Canadian tour of "The Maid of the Mountains" under the auspices of Trans-Canada Theatres, Limited, the same organization now present for the entertainment of Canadian theatre-goers one of the most successful comedy stages of the last decade. H. V. Esmond and Miss Eva Moore, who occupy to-day a unique position among British players and who have scored a larger number of comedy successes than any other actors known to the British stage, will present their latest war comedy success entitled "The Law Divide," which will be the attraction at the Grand Opera House Tuesday and Wednesday, November 9th and 10th, with a special matinee on Wednesday. This play, which attracted thousands of men from overseas, in addition to capacity audiences throughout a phenomenal London run, deals in a most entertaining manner with a domestic problem which has had its parallel in every British dominion that contributed troops to the great war. Mr. Esmond and Miss Moore will present "The Law Divide" with the original London production and the original London company. No more attractive theatrical entertainment is in sight for the Canadian stage during the present season. -Adv.

Royal English Opera Company. Direct from a phenomenally successful engagement in San Francisco, where it proved the sensation of the season, Royal English Opera Company will be seen at the Grand Opera House for three days, commencing Thursday, Nov. 11th, with a special matinee on Saturday, presenting light opera selections from its extensive repertoire, with lists of principals headed by Jefferson De Angeli, Hana Shimozoni, unequalled in the history of the comic opera stage. Among the leading people will be found, in addition to Mr. De Angeli, Hana Shimozoni, such notables as J. Humbard Duffey, tenor; Edward Quinn, baritone; Detmar Poppin, basso; Edith Bennin, soprano; Eunice Gilman, soprano; Charlotte Elliot, soprano; Greth Drew, soprano; Marie Horgan, contralto; Sam Burton, contralto; and Clara Irene Gray, contralto. This company has always been devoted to standard light opera and it is seldom in these days of "jazz" musical shows that one of the few great organizations which present fine lyrical works of a past generation favor us with a visit that the coming of the Royal English Opera Company is a most interesting event and the management of the theatre is to be congratulated on its enterprise. Included in the list of plays presented by the Royal English Opera Company are "Trial by Jury," "The Pirates of Penzance," "H.M.S. Pinafore," "The Chimes of Normandy," "Fire Fly," "The Mikado," "The Bohemian Girl," certainly a most formidable list. Mail orders are now being received for the local engagement. -Adv.

At Griffin's. The unknown is always fascinating and the western mind can little fathom the Oriental and his ways of reasoning. It is to this element of the fascination of the unknown that we can trace the present day popularity of the drama with its Oriental setting. There have of late been many photoplays dealing with the inscrutability of the Chinese and Japanese character, but there was no really great photoplay coming nearer to the line and dealing with the contact of the Briton with the Oriental until the production of "Mr. Wu", a remarkable photoplay dealing with Anglo-Chinese life. This picture will be shown at this theatre today, Tuesday and Wednesday. In this unusual story, we have all the elements of the life of British occupancy in Chinese territory. "Mr. Wu" is L. Chang Wu, a Chinese trader, philosopher and aristocrat, upon whose unhappy contact with the Godfrey family, the story dwells. Matheson Lany, the master English actor, is seen in the role of "Mr. Wu", and his portrayal of the Chinese merchant prince is an absorbing one, and he carries the screen by storm just as he did the stage. "Mr. Wu" is a story of horror. It was a terrible revenge that Mr. Wu planned to execute upon the family of the man who wronged him. The revenge is in keeping with the spirit which prompted him to slay his own errand daughter, but there are no cruelties in the sequence of the story, no objectionable happenings and the climax is worked out in a logical and totally unexpected manner. "Mr. Wu" is truly a remarkable picture. -Adv.

At the Strand. The picture at the Strand Theatre for to-night and to-morrow is one of that rare type that make you feel a little brighter for having seen it. The story is about an ice-man who falls in love with one of his customers, the pretty daughter of a hard-working clerk and a mother with social ambitions. Suddenly the family grows wealthy and goes to California. Jack Straw follows and poses as an "archduke" in the new home of his sweetheart and at the critical moment turns out to be the real archduke. In the three-act play of ice-man, waiter and nobleman Robert Warwick was never more happily cast. He makes of Jack Straw a likable personality. For the last four days of the week the management are happy to announce the coming of Moxey Pickford in "Suds," otherwise known as "The Tail of the Shirt." That all may have the pleasure of seeing "Canada's Little Sweetheart," the Strand will have the usual daily matinee and two complete photoplays Wednesday evening and would request our patrons to watch our advertisements in the newspapers for the daily times of shows. Great interest is being shown in the contest for the Amateur Photographers, who have entered in the competition for the prize of tickets the Strand has offered for the three best photographs of Crawford's grocery window display of "Suds." All Amateur Photographers are welcome to enter this contest. -Adv.
