DOES THE SUN MAKE YOU SQUINT?

PHOTOPHOBIA is a name applied by the science of optics to a "squinting" intolerance of light. This may be caused by a lazy, sluggish iris that does not perform its proper duties as a diaphragm and lets in too much light upon the sensitive retina. Smoked glasses will rest the eyes but after discovering such a condition we will tell you to have the disease remedied by an optician. You can depend upon our judgment.

BRONZE TABLET UNVEILED

In Chalmers Church in Memory of Those Who Served in War.

"And there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain; for the former things are passed away." Revelations: xli. 4.

With the above as his text, Capt. the Reverend Dr. R. J. Wilson preached a most impressive sermon at Chalmers church on Sunday morning, the occasion being the memorial service and unveiling of a bronze tablet in memory of the men of Chalmers church who fell in the war, and in honor of those who served overseas and in Canada. The church was filled for the service, there being a garrison in parade with the R.C. H.A. band. The tablet was unveiled and dedicated by Rev. Dr. Malcolm Macgillivray, for thirty years minister of Chalmers.

"We are met here this morning to unveil and dedicate a bronze tablet erected by the people of this congregation in memory of the men of this congregation who fell in the great war," said Rev. Dr. Wilson, in opening his discourse, "and also in honor of those who served overseas in a military capacity, and in honor of seventy-five other members of this congregation, some of whom were in military service in Canada and who also rendered distinguished service abroad."

"Especially this morning, we ask you to take yourself back to the days of the war—to the anxieties, fears, prayers, and sorrows which they brought—to the days when the telegrams brought the news, brief and to the point. We are asked to remind ourselves that he who dies for liberty truly lives—that he lives in the affection of the gratified people whose homes and firesides he so successfully defended."

"All this may be taken for granted," added the speaker. "As this has been said over and over again, it has been said better than I am saying it this morning. Is there not something else we can say to one another to-day? We know all these brave chaps and the mothers who bore them—the fathers who watched them grow to manhood—the old minister, who baptized many of them, and prepared them for their first communion, the Sunday school teacher, the day school teacher, the professor, the neighbors and friends, who saw them in the family pew, their school boy friends, who played with them. Can we not say something more than this? We think of the small white crosses and then we think of them as we know them. And we ask ourselves whether they have gone. And do they not come back to us? They are lost to the eye, but not to memory or the heart. Accident of death removed them, but they live on with us. To memory and heart they come back, mind to mind, heart to heart, soul to soul, and spirit to spirit. Accident of death does not keep them from us. All that is noblest in them calls to all that is noblest in us."

"And so we are met here this morning to unveil and dedicate this bronze tablet in memory of those brave boys so that their names may remain with us as a permanent record of lives that were nobly lived. What matters if a day or two before us they pass away? It means everything how we, to whom they have handed the torch, how we carry it. Nobly we believed they lived; nobly we believed they died. We hear them calling to us 'carry on' in the spirit in which they gave themselves."

Following the sermon, Rev. Dr. Wilson read the names on the tablet, the members of the congregation standing. Then followed the unveiling ceremony and prayer of dedication, and afterwards, "The Last Post," sounded by one of the trumpeters of the R.C.H.A. in the gallery. The entire ceremonies were of a most impressive character.

The service opened with the National Anthem, the choir rendered the Recessional (Kipling) and J. D. Bankier rendered a solo, "There is No Death," (Geoffrey O'Hara). The hymns sung were "The Lord's My Shepherd," "Lead Kindly Light" and "Rock of Ages."

The tablet contains the following: In memory of the men of Chalmers church who fell in the great war: Oliver H. Allen, Kenneth B. Carruthers, Roderick M. Ferguson, J. Eckford Cow, Robert H. Hawley, Kenneth Mackenzie, Bruce M. McMahon, W. Bastles, Subbass, A. Roddie Stewart, Henry W. Uglow. And in honor of those who served overseas: Colin G. Carruthers, Douglas Carruthers, Eric D. Carruthers, Hendry A. Connell, A. Dow Cornett, Edward G. Craig, Howard S. Dick, George H. Dekson, Charles W. Dekson, George O. H. Driver, W. Farrell Dyde, H. Alexander Dyde, Annie L. Gibson, Malcolm J. Gibson, Lester W. Gill, William M. Goodwin, James T. Cow, Edward B. Cowan, Norman N. Gunn, Gordon Gunn, Harold J. Inman, Thomas R. Little, Ross Little, James M. Macdonnell, Hugh W. Macdonnell, Philip Macdonnell, Walter T. McCree, Gavin S. Macfarlane, John C. Macgillivray, William H. Mackie, W. Kent Macnee, Lindsay Malcolm, Frederick Medley, William P. Muirhead, Herbert G. Murray, George F. Newlands, David S. Nicol, Stewart N. Polson, Thomas H. Renton, Benjamin G. Robertson, Arthur E. Ross, James B. Russell, B. A. Rankin Smith, W. Fielding Smith, William A. Smith, George D. Stewart, Harry A. Stewart, James C. Stewart, Frank P. Strachan, J. Cecil Stewart, R. Halfway Waddell, Roy F. Walker, Harold J. Williamson, Harvey W. Wytock.

And in honor of seventy-five members of the congregation who also served:

The military representatives of the service involved the following: Major-Gen. Sir C. Macdonell, K.C.B., C.M.G., D.S.O., commandant; R.M.C.; Brigadier-General W. B. King, C.M.G., D.S.O. (G.O.C., M.D., No. 3) and officers of his staff; Brigadier-General E. Ross, C.B., C.M.G.; Lieutenant-Colonel W. H. P. Elkins, D.S.O., commanding; Captain H.A., his officers and those of the local R.C.G.A. unit; Lieutenant-Colonel H. E. Pense, D.S.O., M.C., commanding the P.W.O.R., and many returned officers, N.C.O.'s and men.

RECITAL OF SACRED MUSIC

Was Heard in St. George's Cathedral—It Was Highly Meritorious.

The recital of sacred music, arranged by R. R. F. Harvey, drew the music-lovers of Kingston to St. George's Cathedral on Saturday afternoon, sure of an hour's complete enjoyment, for not only are the cathedral organist's own numbers always looked forward to but at his recitals the audience is sure of hearing only music that is entirely satisfying. The organ numbers at Saturday's recital were: "To a Wild Rose" and "Starlight," two short sketches by Macdowell, whose sweet music is so well known. Then Schubert's wonderful interpretation of the German folk lore-story, "The Erl King," to those who know the legend, the crying of the child led astray in the forest by the wicked Erl King, could be heard in the music of the great master so wonderfully played on the cathedral organ. Mr. Harvey's other numbers were: "The Perfect Melody," a gem of Geoffrey O'Hara's, and Rossini's magnificent "Inflammatus et Accensus" from the "Stabat Mater," and a Nocturn of Chopin's.

Peter C. Fair sang Handel's "Comfort Ye My People," from the Messiah, his lovely voice, always at its best, with the organ accompaniment, filling the cathedral. C. B. S. Harvey has seldom been heard to better advantage than in his two numbers, Mendelssohn's beautiful, "O Rest in The Lord," from The Elijah, and Deane Wells' setting of Colonel MacRae's immortal words: "In Flander's Fields," and "Canada's Answer," by an unknown author, set by R. R. F. Harvey to music as beautiful as the words and expressing as surely the promise that faith will be kept with those who sleep. "In Flander's Fields" a faint far off bugle call on the organ ending the accompaniment. Then the clear voice of the treble soloist of the cathedral choir rang out with the assurance, "There is No Death," to Geoffrey O'Hara's music, with the distinct enunciation for which this boy singer is famous, the words of promise reaching every heart. This fine recital ended with "Abide With Me," sung by the audience. A silver collection in aid of St. George's Ward, K.G.H. was taken up at the door.

A Musical Service.
There was a crowded auditorium at Sydenham Street Methodist church for the musical service on Sunday evening. The choir, under the able direction of Miss Shaw, rendered an excellent programme. Miss Annie Pollard, Miss Olive Woodman and Harold Aggrova sang solos, while Arthur Locke played a violin selection. The choir rendered two anthems and Ernest Madrand played an organ selection.

Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Stewart, Carleton Place, celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of their marriage on Thursday. Five of their seven sons—Herbert, Willie, Murray, R. H. and Lloyd were home for the auspicious occasion.
