MINK, FUR STYLE

Skin Now Takes Lead Over All Others in Paris.

New Dyed Rabbit Pelt Closely Resembles Beaver—White Fox in Great Demand.

For those who can afford it, mink is the fur of the moment, declares a Paris fashion authority. It is frightfully expensive, when the color is good, but then good mink wears really well, almost as well as sable. For inexpensive wraps there is a new dyed rabbit skin which gives lovely effects. The fashionable color for this "fancy fur" is not brown, and it is freely used to trim nut-brown tailored suits and wrap coats.

This fur is so carefully prepared that it looks like beaver, even on close inspection. Once again there is a sun on white fox, and millionaires are giving their wives and daughters black fox straight ties and flat muffs—a truly princely gift in present days.

The best furrier in Paris recently asserted that it is practically impossible to secure really fine black foxskins now, no matter what price may be offered.

A genuine Louis XV coat is very smart and at the same time plain and suitable for street wear in the morning. The collar is small, so are the revers. As a rule the turned-back cuffs take gauntlet form, and large pockets are often added. These coats mold the bust, waist and hips; from there down they flare considerably; they are short—knee length, or even a little shorter than that—and everything depends upon the waistcoat which accompanies the coat.

That may be highly decorative and made of rich brocade, thick satin, embroidered canvas or shantung. A brocaded waistcoat is best of all in this connection. The Parisiennes are fond of wearing white satin waistcoats with navy blue tailored suits of Louis XV outline—and very attractive they look.

As for the new clothes—there are many, but perhaps a coarse canvas cloth with a soft wool back takes the lead. This is going to be a season of rough cloth. I have seen very few fine serges, unless for tunic dresses; a rough diagonal serge is in favor with the Paris tailors and also a very warm and beautiful cloth which looks like camel's hair tissue, but has a wool back. Duvelyn is more fashionable than ever and I have seen some practical wraps made of coarse ratine and lined with flowered silk.

DRESS FOR SCHOOL MISS

Made of all wool navy blue serge, trimmed with silk hercules braid. The dress is doubly serviceable because of its bloomer effect, which is a great practical saver.

BRIEF FASHION NOTES

The twice around Egyptian girls should be worn with Eton suits. Taffeta is considered to have abundant possibilities for evening wear. As regards both day frocks, coats and capes, the high-standing collar is essential.

New wool hose to wear with extra this winter come in brown or green heather mixtures, with red silk clocks. A useful veil for all seasons is made of palest rose tulle, with pla points of black chenille. With black shoes or slippers for daytime are worn quite conservative stockings of fine sheer silk in tete de negre or taupe.

The best suit purchase and one that will almost certainly give the longest service is the perfectly plain tailored model, whether of plain color or plaid fabric. The hat of medium size but with a somewhat higher crown and brim drooping slightly, trimmed in a simple fashion and made of a fabric which harmonizes with the dress or suit, will be a great favorite of the season.

Fresh Air and Exercise. Don't depend on the transplanting of monkey glands to keep the body young, advises the United States public health service. In the first place there are not enough monkeys to go around and in the second place fresh air and outdoor exercise are safer and surer.

ARREST SMUGGLERS AND SEIZE LIQUOR

On American Side, Car, Horse, Launches and Whiskey Taken.

Cornwall, Nov. 29.—On Friday, officers from Malone and Massena seized a Ford car at the covered bridge at Hogsburg, across the river from here, which contained a good sized load of gin and Canadian whiskey. In the car were Dan Lazore and Theodore King, who were taken into custody and held for hearing on a charge of smuggling liquor. About the same time a truck, reported to contain 125 cases of Canadian whiskey, was sighted by the officers, who gave chase. Near the Rachel River the officers tried to pass the truck, when the rear axle of the pursuing car broke and the truck got away.

In connection with the whiskey running game on the American side of the river, Collector Welland has issued a statement summarizing the arrests and seizures made so far this year. The statement says that 372 seizures of liquor have been made and 166 automobiles, in variety from a Pierce-Arrow to a Ford, were confiscated, together with 20 horses, four motor launches, 54 tons of hay and 41,159 quarts of whiskey. Upwards of 500 arrests have been made and fines were imposed ranging from $400 to $1,000 in each case. Whiskey was found in carloads of hay, boats, automobiles, trucks, pulpwood, potatoes, secreted in butter, Christmas trees, fish boxes, steel drums and wagons.

REVISING TARIFF THE PRINCIPAL WORK

Premier Meighen Confers With Members on Parliamentary Programme.

Ottawa, Nov. 29.—Since the return of the prime minister from his western tour nearly all of his colleagues in the cabinet have returned to the job, and members of parliament are dropping in day by day to consult with the government and talk over the programme for the next session of parliament. Hon. J. D. Reid, Minister of Railways, is expected back to-day, and Right Hon. C. J. Doherty and Sir George Foster will return from Geneva by Christmas.

It is pretty well understood that the opening of the session which had been planned for January 20th, will be postponed until the first or second Thursday in February. This delay is due to the protracted labors of the tariff commission. It has been definitely decided that the revision of the tariff will be the principal work of the coming session. The redistribution of parliamentary seats will have to go over until 1921 as the results of the decennial census will not be taken until the fall and will not be announced before September.

There is some gossip about cabinet reorganization, but it will be in cabinet representation of Ontario.
