AT NOTRE DAME CONVENT INCIDENTS OF THE DAY

tainment Given by the Girls.

The Christmas entertainment put on in Notre Dame Convent Monday evening, was little short of wonderful in all its phases. The main body of the evening's programme was devoted to the presentation of the little play or series of co-related tableaux, designated "There Was No Room in the Inn." It is a representation of the experiences of the family of a poor, blind Jewish artisan, Misael, around the time of the birth of the Saviour, and with the Holy Family of Bethlehem. Sinael, the father, has been afflicted with blindness all his life, but has borne his burden with patience, and has devoted himself as much as possible to a life of charity and good works. Miriam, one of his little daughters, is awakened from sleep on a certain night and led to the Wednesday, Dec. 22nd, at eight stable of Bethlehem by a guardian angel. Regan played Sara, the wife of Sinael, and played it well. Rachel. Martha, and Esther, the three other children, presented by Miss M. Clarke, Miss E. McGrail, and Miss M. O'Connor, reflected the wonderful ability of their sister Mfriam

The beautiful children of all sizes and ages, dressed as angels, their wonderful singing, and the excellence of the acting transported one back to that manger of two thousand years ago, when the Saviour of Mankind was born. Between the tableaux, musical numbers and recitations and choruses were given. As an introductory programme, 150 children rendered Kriss Kringle, a chorus. A four-handed piano selection by Misses Laliberte, Laliberte, Shannon and LaRose, was a triumph for the young performers and a revelation to the audience. Miss M Gratton charmed with the Christmas song, "The Newborn King." In the interludes many fine numbers were heard and enjoyed. The children of the third classes, accompanied by their teacher at the piano. gave the "Song of the Chimes," a sweet lullaby song. The Misses Laliberte took their places at the pianos for the second interlude for a two-piano duet, "Valse Caprice." Thome, with the width of the stage separating the two players and their instruments and not a note out of place. With characteristic sweetness and charm, Miss Marie McDonald sang "The Gift." Her sweet voice put a fine interpretation on the song, now soft in humility and then rising in triumph. In the last interlude, "Bethlehem," one of the fine poems of the Rev. D. A. Casey, was ably recited by Miss Bessie Dunn,

The whole congert was a great success. Every music lover or admirer of art who attended was delighted with the excellence of the various presentations, and teachers and pupils alike are to be congratulated on the care and time taken in developing and perfecting the wonderful ability shown by the per-

THE LATE HUGH DIXON

Burial of Young Man Who Was Accidentally Shot The funeral of the late Hugh Dixon took place from his late residence. Battersea, on Monday afternoon to Sandhill cemetery. The religious service was held at the residence by Rev. Mr. Coddling, and there was a large attendance from the Orange lodges at Inverary, Sunbury and Battersea. The casket was banked with beautiful floral tributes, testifying to the high esteem in which the deceased was held. The pall bearers were William Abbott, I. Vanvalkingburg, Charles Gibson, Leonard Patterson, Lawrence Holder and S Hogan. The funeral was under the direction of James Reid, undertakers, Kingston. The remains were placed in the cemetary vault.

WILLIAM HAD A SECRET HE WOULD NOT TELL

Refused to Say Where He Got Booze and Was Remanded.

William Mitchell, a well-known man around the city, had a secret he would not tell in the police court, on Tuesday morning, and as a result he was remanded till Thursday. Said secret was as to where he had thirst on Monday. He was gathered in as a drunk. He pleaded guilty to the charge, but when the magistrate asked him where he had secured the liquor, he would not tell, apart from the fact that he had met some friends from Montreal.

"Are you going to tell me where you got your liquor?" asked the magistrate of Mitchell. But Mitchell remained silent. And to jail he was taken, and on Thurday he will be given another chance to divulge his great secret.
