"Nomads of the North" Presented First of This Week.

"Nomads of the North" is a photoplay which seems to have been es pecially built for the connoisseur of moving pictures. Without any ploor action, the wonder and grandeur of the film as a scenic production would alone be enough for the most exacting. With the unusually interesting story by James Oliver Curwood woven into it, it becomes a play which is one of the nearest proaches to perfection ever staged.

Of late the producers have learned the value of the personal supervision the author of the story which is dramatized for the screen.
