BERMUDA SEEKS RELIEF

From U. S. Duties on its Potato and Onion Products.

Washington, Jan. 20.—Great Britain's little self-governing colony of Bermuda, which consists of a group of more than three hundred islands in the Atlantic, 640 miles directly south-east of New York, and which is attracting thousands of Canadian and United States tourists for the winter, with the fetching slogan, "Frost to Flowers in Forty Hours," is threatened with disaster in its agricultural interests by the pending emergency tariff of the United States. This tariff, as planned, imposes a duty of twenty-five cents a bushel on potato and onions, and forty cents a bushel on onions, both of which products are grown in the Bermudas, and are the islands' principal crops.

The Bermuda government, when first word of the new tariff reached it, immediately dispatched its director of agriculture and a member of the agricultural board to Washington in an endeavor to have Bermuda relieved of the proposed duties. Sir Auckland Geddes, the British ambassador, received the Bermudian representatives and placed their case before the department of state for submission to the Finance committee of the senate, to which the emergency tariff bill was referred by the senate after its passage by the house of representatives. While the tariff is designed to protect farmers of the United States from importation of potatoes from Canada and onions from Spain and Egypt, it would operate against those products from Bermuda. The Bermuda potatoes and onions are grown almost exclusively for the New York city market, which they reach in midwinter, when no other fresh potatoes and onions are on the market. The farmers of Bermuda have put their capital in the present growing crops and fear imposition of the tariff would be disastrous to many of them.

Should the present emergency tariff bill fail of passage in the senate, where there is much opposition to it from the Democrats, the Bermudians would be able to market a large portion of their crop in New York before the subject of tariff again is taken up by the extraordinary session of congress, which probably will begin early in March, after Mr. Harding is inaugurated. The Bermudians plan to seek relief from duties on their products when that bill comes before congress.

NAVIGATORS MEETING

Canadian Federation Absorbs All the Local Organizations.

A meeting of the Kingston masters, mates and pilots took place in the Board of Trade rooms on Wednesday evening. Captain J. W. Kirkwood presided, and introduced Captain Gilchrist, president of the Pacific Coast Navigators Federation, and Mr. Goodlad, secretary of the same organization at Vancouver, B.C.

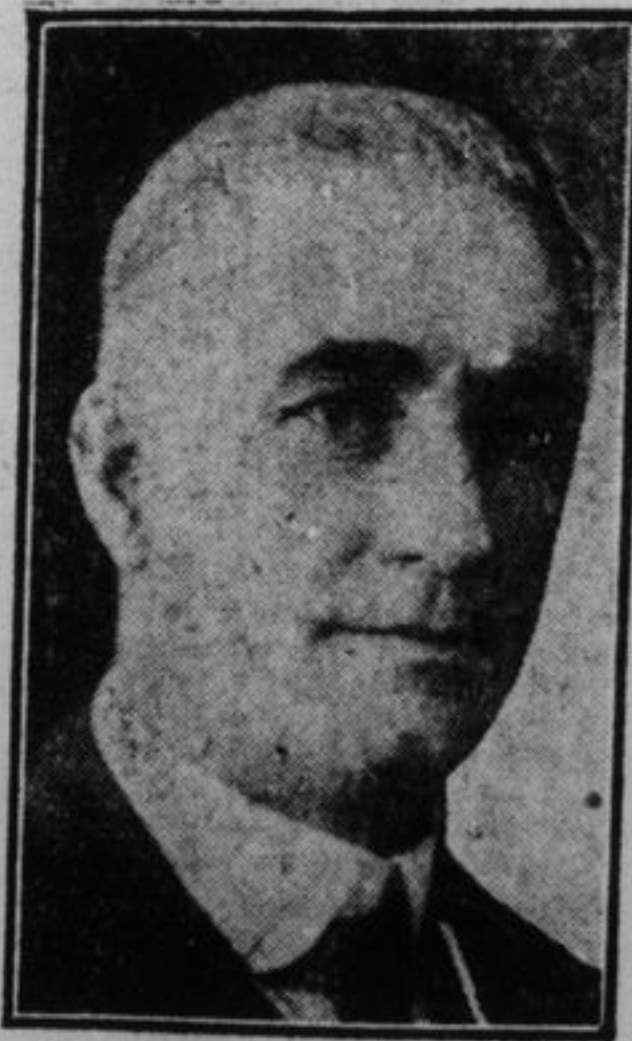

Captain Gilchrist spoke on the organization of the Canadian Navigators' Federation, which replaces and absorbs all of the local organizations represented by the Atlantic and Pacific coast masters and mates' association, and the St. Lawrence and Great Lakes Guilds. The division of jurisdiction was a distinct disadvantage, and was injurious to the interests of sailors. Now, under the Canadian Navigators' Federation, which was the result of the recent Ottawa convention, there will be a great improvement in the Canadian merchant service.

Loosen Up on Sunday.

Canadian Freeman.
Why should you search frantically for a dime when the collection plate is passed on Sunday? How many dimes did you spend on absences and the movies during the week? How many trashy magazines and papers did you invest in? Pay your way when you go to church.

A dime for the Sunday offering! Why, did you dare insult a colored porter with a tip of that size, you'd select a dark corner to offer it so as to hide your blushes. Don't give anyone the impression that you rate the pullman porter higher than your pastor.

In the good old days you dropped a dime on the plate and metaphorically clapped yourself on the back for your generosity. But then you weren't making so much money, and the dime was worth a dime. You know its value to-day. If it isn't much use to you, of what earthly use is it as a help towards running the various church activities? Come along, friend. Loosen up on Sunday morning. Don't bum your way to Heaven.

TO INSIST UPON GERMAN DISARMAMENT

Paris, Jan. 20.—The prime purpose of the Briand ministry in directing the government of France will be to obtain a real security for Germany. It is disarming of Germany. It was declared in the new ministry's statements of policy presented to the chamber of deputies this morning.

Was a Mistake.

In our issue of the 14th inst., we had a report of the arrest of a young man at Centreville charged with arson and was headed "Stanley Doupe charged with setting fire to a farmer's barn." Unfortunately there is a Stanley Doupe living near Centreville but he has not been arrested. The young man who was arrested was Albert Doupe. The Whig hastens to correct this unfortunate mistake and to assure Mr. Doupe and his many friends of sincere regret that his name was associated with the affair.
