URGES AN IRISH PEACE

In Order to Retain Friendship of the United States.

London Feb. 25.—Viscount Grey, speaking at the National Liberal Club said that although the war was so recent, there was already talk of possible future wars, and of a possible war between—of all the nations in the world—Great Britain and the United States. He added that he was of those who thought that there would be little pleasure or interest in living in this world if there was war between those two nations. He said he believed that cordial relations and co-operation between them would do more than anything else for the benefit of the whole world. The Viscount went on:

"I believe that this question should be handled now with regard to certain plain facts, and one fact is very plain to me. That is there will be no real cordiality between this country and the United States as long as the Irish question remains where it is. It is idle to discuss British-American relations without having that fact in our minds and recognizing it openly. I dispose of war between us and America by describing it as unthinkable and inconceivable, but that does not make it certain that it might not happen.

"Infinitely and eternally are unthinkable and inconceivable, but most people believe that they happen. I would much rather that people, especially in the United States, where they have been discussing this question of the inconceivable, brought out by the plain fact that we have a treaty with the United States which, if it be observed, will make a treaty under which, if the two governments cannot agree, they will resort to a commission which will investigate and report and recommend a settlement and under which at least a year's time is given for reflection before a breach of the peace takes place.

"U.S. Very Conscious.
"I do not think the two great democracies will ever go to war if they observe that treaty but what I do regret is that in the United States they seem to be very conscious of the pact of the Anglo-Japanese alliance and discuss the possibility of its involving their country and ourselves in war, and do not seem to be so much aware of the fact of the existence of this treaty, made between us and the United States government, ratified by the Senate and now in full force. If we wish the treaties to be observed, it is a good thing to keep them continually in mind and make the public familiar with them.

"Care has been taken that there shall be no conflict between the Anglo-Japanese alliance and that of the treaty. Where there was talk of negotiating a treaty of universal arbitration with the United States, we were also discussing a renewal of the Anglo-Japanese alliance, and it was obvious that we might be put in a position of finding ourselves at one moment under engagement to go to war on behalf of Japan, and under engagement with the United States to go to arbitration and not war. That was so obvious that the foreign secretary approached the Japanese government on the subject.

"He was met in a spirit of fairness and of true statesmanship and they agreed readily and without murmur to a clause being put in the renewal of the Anglo-Japanese alliance, making it clear that in the event of a quarrel between Japan and any country with whom we had a treaty of universal arbitration there was no obligation upon us to do otherwise than to keep our treaty. This clause was intended to apply to the particular treaty we afterwards made with the United States."

He is survived by his wife, who resides at 45 Clergy street; his father, Joseph Smith, Oakville; four sisters, Mrs. Anna Bell, Kingston; Mrs. Martin Liles, Elginburg; Mrs. Sherman Powley, Oakville; Mrs. John Johnston, Alexandria; two brothers, William, Cataract; Joseph, Calgary; and an uncle, Captain James Smith, Kingston.
