tion will be an honor to his constitu-

The lesson of the Spracklin case will long be remembered by the people of Ontario, as it illustrates the folly of employing members of the clergy for police duty either in the enforcement of law or the custody of offenders. Men to be successful in this work require long training and experience. The mistake in this case was made when Rev. Mr. Spracklin was employed. If the clergy are to leave their pulpits and turn detectives for the Ontario license board, why not turn over to them the management of the provincial and municipal police, and let them pursue wrong doing to their hearts content? Why should the Ontario Temperance Act be considered the special province of clergymen?

The attorney general and the Ontario License Board ought to recognize that the office of a minister of the gospel is a purely spiritual office, Every once in a while a statesman and that in filling that office s clergyman has ample opportunity for the employment of all of his talents and energy if he is properly seized of the responsibilities he has assumed. There is no room for preaching on Sunday and gun-running during the rest of the week. The whole cause of the change that has come over the clergy in this province is due to the prohibition issue, the purely moral features of "People came to Kingston the oth- which have become lost. Efforts to dum. Some ministers refuse to recog- | gripe or irritate. 25c.

When the Ontario Government is considering reforms affecting police magistrates, one of the changes which ought to be considered is that these officials should be made entirely independent of municipal councils with regard to the remuneration which they are to receive. As well have the salary of the county judge controlled by aldermen as that of a police magistrate.
