JOSELYN'S WIFE

By Kathleen Norris
Author of "The Heart of Rachel," "Martie, the Unconquered," "The Story of Julia Page," "Mother," etc.

There was left them the alternative of struggling out into the storm, fighting their way for more than a bitter mile to the station, getting into the city by eight o'clock, when Lillian, wet and blown, might still join the party at the Plaza, leaving Lindsay to dine and amuse himself otherwise as his fancy dictated. And had Lillian foreseen the events of the following morning, she would certainly have adopted this course at any sacrifice.

But his house was delightfully warm, and Koto's dinner was already dispensing a delicious odour. No one need ever know that his mother had not chaperoned this affair, the Japanese was discretion's self, and Lillian was no girl to be flattered by a touch of the unexpected. More, she began to enjoy the almost forgotten emotion of terrified pleasure, the situation was full of theatrical beauty, and she herself was the leading woman. She borrowed a richly embroidered mandarin coat which Pepper sometimes wore about the house, and came downstairs a vision of marvellous beauty. It was not only pleasantly exciting; it was the easiest thing to do. And Lillian, above all things, loved ease.

And then had come the early trip into town, for Lindsay was leaving for Montreal, to bring his mother home, and Lillian had to keep her engagement with Gibbs. Lindsay was all devotion; this attitude, in fact, was the one element in the matter of which Lillian had taken no account. He alarmed her with the vehemence of his affection, and made her nervous and uncertain. She had supposed that he would leave her at the studio door, but instead he came upstairs, and the two men talked together a few minutes.

During this time Lillian experienced exquisite uneasiness. Gibbs showed a disconcerting familiarity with old Mrs. Pepper's movements. When had she gotten back? How did she find Montreal?

"I didn't know you knew old Mrs. Pepper so well?" Lillian said, when Lindsay was gone.

"Oh, I see her sometimes, watching the tennis," he answered carelessly. "Now take your wraps off, and I'll have Marie bring you in some coffee!" Her big fur coat in his arms, he caught up her bare hand. "No ring?" he smiled.

For he was painting her in a dull green robe, and the big jade ring she frequently wore was an excellent bit of colour in the picture.

If she had had the quickness to say that she had left it at home! But Lillian was not quick at best, and just now she was tired and confused. She had left it on the washstand in the bathroom next to Mrs. Pepper's room; she remembered its exact position, and she said that she would write Mrs. Pepper at once, and ask her to return it.

"Well run along, and get into your rig!" Gibbs, said unobtrusively. But when she had disappeared into the little model's room, and when Marie had brought in the coffee, and when he had loitered about waiting idly, and still she did not come, he picked up the telephone book. As well to settle the matter quickly: the delay of a few hours might mean

Bread with Raisins is a Better Food

Forget, for a moment, the delicious flavor of raisin bread and think of its value as a food.

Raisins furnish 1560 units of energizing nutriment per pound, as well as natural iron which brings the rose tint to women's and children's cheeks.

The raisin's pure fruit sugar is in practically predigested form, so it is almost immediately assimilated. This fruit-food value added to the nourishment of wheat, forms an almost ideal food.

Send 'round the corner or telephone to your grocer or bake shop for a loaf of Sun-Maid Raisin Bread or bake a loaf at home according to the recipe at the right.

The raisin flavor permeates the bread. Try the bread plain, with or without butter. Learn what delicious toast it makes. Serve at least twice a week to break the monotony of plain bread.

Every first-class baker sells Sun-Maid Raisin Bread that the ring was swept carelessly away and lost.

And so it was Gibbs' turn to have his castle of dreams fall about him in ashes. When Lillian came innocently back from the model-room, eager for the exquisite hour they had both been anticipating for days, he saw for the first time the woman she really was.

"Your ring's all right," he said presently. "I telephoned, the Japanese had found it."

Her eyes flew to his face. She saw what he knew, and her color faded a little.

"Gibbs," she said quickly and breathlessly. "You know how it happened—I wanted to tell you all about it anyway. But Lindsay asked me not to. You see, it was storming horribly."

Beautiful, eager, in her green robe, she poured out the story as she had arranged and adapted it in the night. And slowing mixing the colors on his palette, not meeting her eyes, Gibbs listened. There was a certain shade of yellow-brown that would always speak to him of this hideous moment, with its blare of brassy truth, and its taste of ashes. When she ended, with a wide-eyed, innocent appeal, he smiled, and still with averted eyes, he nodded.

"Blame you? No-o-o, I don't blame you, Lillian!" he said gently, after a silence.

"But smile at me, Gibbs," she said, with an uneasy laugh and a rather uncertain resumption of her old confident manner. "Or I'll have to come over there and make you smile!"

Before he could speak again the door was opened by her husband. She knew that in the moment he had realized her deception about Lindsay Pepper she had come close to losing Gibbs. She felt a contempt for the weakness in herself that had permitted her to risk the love of the man she really desired for the old admirer who had lost, by contrast with the new, any power to stir her. But Lillian could not think that

Gibbs would not return to her. He was hurt, he was sore and angry now, but she had still, as a weapon, her dangerous propensity and she had still the disturbing and appealing beauty he had found irresistible.

So Lillian played her game safely, and bided her time. This storm would blow over, as other storms had. She would need only a little patience, she would need caution. Patience and watchfulness were among Lillian's virtues.

CANADIAN NURSES ARE NOW AT WORK

Mission to Rumania Have Entered Coltsel Hospital at Bucharest.

Montreal, March 10.—Word has been received in Montreal that the Canadian nursing mission to Rumania last month entered the Coltsel Hospital of Bucharest and are occupied in demonstrating modern methods of nursing as well as undertaking part of the actual work of nursing in that institution, which is the leading hospital of the Rumanian capital.

Miss Dorothy Cotton, matron of the nursing mission, in letters to friends in this city, explains that it was impossible for the mission on arrival in Bucharest to open at once a training school for nurses, as was the original intention. Every opportunity for making themselves familiar with the hospitals of Bucharest was given the nurses, who received much courteous attention, both in connection with their profession and as visiting Canadians. The medical men of the city undertook that the Canadian nurses should visit the various hospitals and personally interested themselves in the nurses' plans for beginning work.

It was decided that in February the members of the mission should enter the Coltsel hospital and there work under three Rumanian physicians.

In addition to working in the Coltsel hospital, the Canadian nurses visit another hospital two afternoons a week to demonstrate modern methods of caring for the sick. It is expected that these demonstrations will be extended to other hospitals throughout the country.

Needed at Dances And the Sea Shore

(Aids to Beauty)

Here is a home treatment for removing hairs that is quick, painless and inexpensive: With some powdered delatone and water make enough paste to thickly cover the objectionable hairs, apply and after 2 or 3 minutes rub off, wash the skin and it will be left soft, clear and hairless. This treatment will not mar the skin, but to avoid disappointment, be careful to get real delatone. Mix fresh as wanted.

The death occurred Monday of Mrs. Catherine Eyre, Temperance Lake, rear of Yonge and Escott townships. She was seventy-nine years of age and a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Edward Earl.
