LILLIAN GISH IN "WAY DOWN EAST"

This Old Stage Favorite Gains by Its Screen Resurrection.

Speaking of D. W. Griffith's "Wonder Spectacle," "Way Down East," which comes to the Grand Opera House in Kingston for three days commencing on Monday evening, April 11th, with matinees on Tuesday and Wednesday, the London Advertiser says: "After twenty-two years of pleasure and instruction provided to the great general public through the medium of the stage version, Lottie Blair Parker's famous play, "Way Down East," has entered upon what promises to be a greater triumph than even the most sanguine imagination of author or producer could have pictured in its film presentation, which is being presented at the Grand Opera House twice each day this week.

Even the most blasé of the theatregoers, with the impression that he or she has already seen the utmost that the silver screen has to offer in the way of exquisite and even wonderful exemplifications of the almost miraculous ability of the picture producer to combine the sister arts in a picture of surpassing beauty and infinitude of detail, must perforce admit that in the film production of "Way Down East," D. W. Griffith has surpassed anything previously attempted, and that he has done so must largely be credited to an ability and intuition very much akin to the Scott's "second sight" with which he has selected the principals, the art directors, scenery, and in fact, every detail for the elaboration of this simple story of plain people and common every-day life.

As Anna Moore, the heroine of the story, Lillian Gish has made a name for herself as an emotional actress not second even to that attained by the "Divine Sarah" when at the height of her career, while as leading man, Richard Barthelme, in the role of David Bartlett, gives a support to the development of the story that could not by the most extravagant imagination be excelled.

The story of Anna Moore, who lives in a humble New England home with her mother, and is forced by straitened circumstances to seek the financial aid of wealthy relatives, is full from the beginning to the end of the pathos of Miss Gish has never found an expression outside of the humble ranks of life where repression of feeling has become second nature. As a result of her visit to her rich friends she becomes the victim of Lennox Sanderson, a man whose life plaything has been "woman." A mock marriage, the birth of a baby, which dies shortly afterwards, and Sanderson's reputation of any responsibility for the future of his innocent victim, give Miss Gish wonderful opportunity for the fullest display of her powers as an emotional actress, a power which mere words refuse to fittingly describe.

To relate the story in detail would not alone be too lengthy for the available space, but would tend to destroy the delight of watching the unfolding of this wonderful life story on the screen. Suffice it to say that there are innumerable scenes which fix themselves by their intensity, beauty or artistic setting on the mind with a grip which cannot be refused. Of these scenes, perhaps the outstanding is the rescue of Anna Moore by David Bartlett from the floating block of ice just as it is about to be hurled over the falls in the great rush of ice and water when the spring break-up takes place; the scene in the fashionable ballroom with the gorgeously attired women, this scene being in colors; the old-time barn dance with its true-to-life participants, and dozens more might be mentioned as worthy of special note.

The music, under the direction of A. D. Jordan, is a feature in itself, its melodies and cadences being adapted to the spirit of the story in unusually clever manner.

To say that every person in the packed house last night went away deeply touched by the pathos of the story, and delighted with the special presentation of it is in no sense going beyond the strict confines of truth. The picture will be presented twice each day for the remainder of the week, and that there will be many repeat visits to see it is assured.—Advt.

"The Maple Leafs."

In response to the many requests from the ex-service men in Canada, especially former fourth division men, Captain M. W. Plunkett, the producer of most of the soldier entertainments supplied our boys in France, has gathered together the "Maple Leafs" theatrical company, and will present them on a homecoming tour of Canada in their original overseas revue, "Camouflage," at the Grand on Saturday, April 9th. The "Maple Leafs" were the official party of the fourth division in France and were one of the greatest favorites of the C. E. F. Their musical revue was written for them in France, and it proved to be one of the brightest and most tuneful shows ever staged in close proximity to the firing line. There are several wonderful "girls" among the "Maple Leafs," all of whom did their bit with rifle and bayonet before being chosen by the captain for service in the entertainment corps. It is this fact which makes the artistry of the soldier-act-

CABINET MINISTER MILKS BOSS.

To inaugurate the "drink more milk campaign," Hon. Mr. Doherty, Ontario's minister of agriculture, milked a pure-bred Holstein in front of Ontario parliament buildings in Toronto. Above the minister is seen all dolled up in bib and tucker in the act of extracting the lacteal fluid. E. H. Sonelhouse, of the Milk Producers' Association, is an interested spectator. The full-length picture shows Mr. Doherty addressing the spectators on the advantages of using more milk.

ROY REYNOLD'S STORY.

Regarding Bonus to Biggs Again Under Consideration. Toronto, April 8.—Roy Reynolds' story regarding "commissions" or bonus for Hon. F. C. Biggs, minister of public works, in connection with the purchase by the Ontario government, through L. C. Parkin, Dundas, of $117,000 worth of motor trucks, was again before the legislature public accounts committee to-day, when Reynolds was examined closely with the idea of showing that the evidence he gave before the committee was "diametrically opposed" to that given in Hamilton in trial of his action against Parkin for commissions. Reynolds said that there were things he had not been asked about at the Hamilton trial, and he had not mentioned them. He was not considering the political side of the matter when he testified there. W. A. McLean, deputy minister, was called and corroborated the statements of Chief Engineer Hogart in connection with the purchase of trucks.

Army and Navy Reserves.

London, April 8.—The intention of the British government to issue an appeal for volunteers for transport and other essential services, in view of the prospective triple alliance strike, was announced in the house late to-day by Lloyd George. A royal proclamation would call up the army and navy reserves, he said. The government also intends to enroll special constables and form a special emergency corps for a period of ninety days to protect the police in the question of their duty, he said. All efforts by the prime minister to bring the miners and mine owners together have failed, and the executives of the triple alliance went into conference this afternoon to decide when a sympathetic strike should be called.
