STORY OF POLICE COURT

Two Old Pals With a Bottle, With the Usual Result.

Two old pals met in Kingston on Thursday, namely, "Bill" Simons and "Bill" Mitchell. Simons has been in Montreal for some time, so when he came to Kingston he did not forget to bring something on his hip, with which to treat his old friends. "Bill" Mitchell was the first pal he met, and as "Bill" was feeling very dry he was the first to have a drink out of the bottle. While talking over old times, they polished off the liquor in fine style, but fell by the wayside, and were gathered in on a charge of being intoxicated, and at the end of what they dreamed of being a perfect day, the couple were unanimous in their verdict that Thursday had been their "Jonah day."

"Bill" Mitchell was the first to be called when the curtain went up in the police court on Friday morning. Asked where he had secured his liquor it almost brought tears to his eyes to tell the cad that he had been treated by his bosom friend in the prisoners' dock, but "Bill" played the game and told all.

"Bill No. 1" was touched off with a fine of $10 and costs, or one month in jail, and then "Bill No. 2" was called upon to answer to two charges that of having liquor in a public place, and with being intoxicated. He pleaded guilty to both charges, and asked the court to be as lenient as possible with him.

"This is the first false step I have made since last October," said Simons.

Magistrate Farrell looked over the O.T.A. book to see just what he could do in the matter, and afterwards announced that the penalty would be $100 and costs, or three months in jail.

And the blow almost killed "Billy No. 2." "Might just as well hang me," he remarked.

And then the two bosom friends were ushered out of the court room.

The second chapter in the case of a young couple who aired their troubles before the magistrate a week ago, was heard. Hubby was charged with non-support, but it was shown very clearly that there was no foundation for the charge. Hubby had been quite willing to support his wife and child, and make it very pleasant for all concerned in their little home on Princess street, but it was shown that the young wife had a love for dances, card parties and staying out late at nights. The case had been enlarged for a week, in an endeavor to get the couple re-united. T. J. Rigney, who appeared for the accused, said the husband was quite willing to support his wife and child, but she had refused to stay with him.

The young wife wanted her husband bound over to keep the peace, but there had been no evidence offered to show that he had abused her in any way. The magistrate was very anxious to bring about a peaceful home, and for this reason stated that if the husband at any time did abuse his wife, he would be dealt with. And so the case was disposed of in this way.

"Pussyfoot" And Moderation

The citizens of Kingston will no doubt give "Pussyfoot" Johnston a courteous reception. He is entitled as much as any one else to express his views—which have been repudiated by the people of Scotland, and which the people of the United States are finding it impossible to carry out. He will in time discover that Moderation and Temperance are the only cures for the evils brought about by the abuse of alcohol, not by its moderate and temperate use.

Samuel Gompers, the great Labor leader, said:—"We ask that we be given an opportunity, not only to preach temperance, but to practice it." He strenuously opposes prohibition.

Lately Henry Somerset, the great temperance leader, said:—"Prohibition will put back the cause of temperance twenty years." Temperance means moderation, not prohibition.

The late Archbishop Magee, Archbishop of York, said:—"If I must take my choice whether England should be free or sober I declare, strange as such a declaration may sound, coming from one of my profession, that I should say it would be better that England should be free than that England should be compulsorily sober. I would distinctly prefer freedom to sobriety, because with freedom we might in the end attain sobriety; but in the other alternative we should eventually lose both freedom and sobriety."

Ex-President Taft said:—"National prohibition is a most dangerous proposition."

The New York World said:—"The country is having an object lesson in the utility of attempting to make the public observe a law for which it has no respect."

THE ANTI-BRITISH FEELINGS

Of C. A. Windle Are Exposed In Quotation From An Article.

C. A. Windle claims that the quotations made from his writings to show his anti-British feelings are not fair inasmuch as they are culled from writings previous to the United States entering the war. Since then he has been on no uncertain ground.

Certainly there is no doubt about his recent feelings toward Great Britain, for in the "Iconoclast" for March, 1921, immediately before his present visit to Ontario, there is a long editorial of denunciation of British policy. The article closes with this paragraph.

"Was such a civilization worth saving? Is this heartless old hag, clothed in garments of lust, loot and murder, worthy the life of the humblest son of Columbia who died in France? He thought he gave his life for the honor of a Vestal Virgin; about to be ravished by the Huns. America threw all her resources into the fight with the same idea, but we find instead of a Vestal Virgin we fought for a vile old prostitute that she might parade her shame and infamy throughout the world."

This quotation has been compared with the original and the reference is to England and to England alone.—Advt.
