Told in the Twilight

Mrs. W. R. Sills, Mack street, was the hostess of a very pleasant tea on Wednesday, when her guests had the pleasure of meeting Mrs. G. R. Handley, Napanee, and Mrs. S. H. Clark, Entrance, Alberta, two much feted visitors in town. Mrs. Colin Macpherson made tea at the daintily appointed tea table with its centre of spring blossoms, assisted by Miss Marion Sills. One of the pleasures of an exceptionally pleasant afternoon, was a chat with Mrs. Hare, Mrs. Sills' mother, who has always a kindly word for her daughter's guests.

Mrs. A. E. Knapp, Johnson street, who was in Brockville for the meeting of the Montreal branch of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Methodist church, has returned to town.

Mrs. and Mrs. C. Bermingham, Barrie street, have returned from Riverside, Cal., this week.

Mrs. W. H. Kimmerly and daughter, Miss Cora, Napanee, spent the week-end at Mrs. H. Hembry's, Pine street.

Mrs. Richard Cartwright, University avenue, has returned from Napanee.

Mrs. S. Surtcliffe, Victoria street, represented Queen street Methodist church at the W.M.S. meeting in Brockville.

Mrs. George K. MacLeod, who has been with her sister, Mrs. J. Bell Carruthers, at "Annandale," for several weeks, returned to St. John, N.B., on Wednesday.

Mrs. W. R. Givens and Mrs. Seacombe, "Maitland House," have returned from Florida.

Mrs. W. H. Dalby, Nelson street, who was in Brockville at the W. A. annual meeting, returned to town on Friday.

Mrs. W. H. Holland, Toronto, is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Holland at Eastview Park, Kingston.

Dr. and Mrs. John Mackie Scotland, are with Mr. and Mrs. James Minnes, Bagot street, and are receiving a very hearty "Welcome home," not only from the members of St. Andrew's congregation, but from their many Kingston friends.

Rev. W. W. Weese, Kingston, is a visitor at the home to his daughter, Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Street, Waywood.

Mrs. Matthew Hanton and Miss Olga Brown, Frankville, are in Kingston to see the former's aged mother.

Mrs. Herbert Sager, Toronto, is the guest of Mrs. Harry Hembry, 17 Pine street.

Mrs. T. Dowdell, Holy Trinity rectory, Merrickville, is spending a few days with her sister, Mrs. A. H. Fair, Bagot street.

Miss Frances Foulkes, "Calderwood," sails for England to-day.

Mrs. W. W. Chown has returned from the W.M.S. meetings at Brockville.

Mrs. Fred Ball and Miss Pierce represented Princess street Methodist church at the meetings of the Women's Missionary Society in Brockville.

H. Weekley, Tina, Neb., is visiting Miss E. Barnum, Barrie street.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Rennie, Braaside farm, Napanee road, announce the engagement of their only daughter, Marion Grosart, to Captain Joseph Ellison Gould, Point Pleasant, West Virginia, only son of the Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Gould, Dayton, Kentucky, the marriage to take place the latter part of June.

Mrs. H. M. Kettle, Deseronto, announces the engagement of her second daughter, May Lily, to Arthur William Thomas Mathew, son of Mrs. William Woodgate, Port Colborne, the marriage to take place the middle of June.

The engagement is announced of Miss Hyacinthe Shaw, daughter of the late William Sismore Shaw, Madras, and Mrs. R. S. E. Winton, to Major H. Willis O'Connor, P.P.C.L.L., A.D.C., to the chief of the general staff, son of the late Daniel O'Connor, K.C., Ottawa, and nephew of Mrs. C. Bermingham, Kingston.

FAMOUS "WITS" OF HISTORY

By MARK STUYVESANT.

The formality which hedged kings and queens, coloring every act supposedly designed for their comfort, sometimes produced amusing moments. For instance, there was the reply that came back to Queen Victoria when she shivered at dinner and asked Stockmar to go to the master of the household to complain that the dining room was always cold. The answer was:

"You see, properly speaking, it is

Mme. de Luynes sent for the valet de chambre, upholsterer of the Queen, in order that he might show it to the valet de chambre, upholsterer of the king. The latter declared that he was very sorry, but the dust did not concern him. He said that the upholsterers, to be sure, made the bed of the Queen, but that they could not touch the bed of state. That, he declared, passed as furniture when the Queen was not sleeping in it, and not our fault." For the Lord Stewart lays the fire only, and the Lord Chamberlain lights it."

Identically the same sort of discomfort and the same disconcerting tangle of red tape confronted Marie Antoinette when she discovered dust upon the counterpane of her bed of state. She showed it to Mme. de Luynes, we are told in the memoirs of the Duke de Richelieu.

In this case could only concern the officers of the garde meuble. It is said that two full days were spent trying to find one who should, because of his office, remove the offending dust.

One of Marie Antoinette's fads during one period was to wear a head-dress higher than any of the other women of the court. Of course the Queen had a better chance to build a towering head-dress because at her command were the best artists in the country. It happened that the Duchesse de Chartres had determined to out rival the Queen. Inch by inch the coiffures rose higher in this astonishing rivalry. The duchess was always beaten.

At last, with the aid of a hair-dresser named Leonard, the duchess invented for her own exclusive use a head-dress called "Le Pouf Sentimental." It was composed of numberless plumes waving at the top of a tower. Fourteen yards of gauze or lace were used with many folds and pleats surrounding it. The ornaments, we are told by Jackson, were two waxen figures, representing the baby—who became King Louis Philippe—in his nurse's arms. Beside them was placed a parrot pecking at a plate of cherries, and reclining at the nurse's feet was the waxen figure of a black boy. On different parts of the edifice were the initials made of the hair of the husband, the father and the father-in-law of the fair wearer of the sentimental coiffure.

To the vast delight of the duchess her coiffure proved to be two full inches higher than that worn by the Queen. The Queen's coiffure was named "Coiffure a Loge d'Opera," in honor of the occasion on which it was worn.

So delighted, however, was the duchess that she had defeated the Queen in their rivalry, that she forgot the immense height of her head-dress. Leaning forward to speak to her father, the head-dress became entangled in the ornaments on the opposite side of the box. When the duchess resumed her upright position, a long piece of gauze remained attached to the ornament of the box, and the parrot and the cherries fell on the duke. Luckily he caught them and saved them from falling on the audience in the body of the theatre.

If this had happened—for everyone had noted the marvellous height of the duchess' head-dress—she would have been subjected to the humiliation of public laughter, for no one could have restrained himself. Needless to say, however, the Queen took vast delight in pointing out to the duchess that even though her head-dress had been higher at the beginning of the evening, it was far lower at the end of the evening, which gave the royal party much amusement.

Rinso

Just Soak the Clothes in Rinso Suds—then Rinse

It's not a cake soap—not a chip soap—not a washing powder, but a wonderful new form of soap—in granules—which washes clothes immaculately clean—gleaming white—without either rubbing or boiling.

These pure granules are so rich in cleansing value that they loosen the hardest dirt while the clothes soak for a few hours. Yet Rinso is so harmless that it doesn't even redden your hands.

It seems almost unbelievable that RINSO cleans so easily. Just soak the clothes for a few hours in the pure, rich, cleansing Rinso suds—then rinse a few times in either warm or cold water and they are as clean and white as though you had boiled and rubbed them for hours. One trial will convince you.

Try RINSO Next Monday

Follow the easy directions on the Rinso package and see how it soaks out the dirt that you used to get out by main force.

If you have a washing machine—

Soak the clothes overnight in the usual Rinso way. The cleansing suds loosen every bit of dirt. In the morning operate the machine for a few minutes and the clothes are perfectly clean—even the most soiled spots.
