EXHIBITION AT CONVENT

Of Art and Needlework by the Pupils is Most Interesting.

One of the most interesting exhibitions of what proper instruction can do for the really talented children and young girls of our city, is on view in the Notre Dame convent, where the work of the pupils, executed during the past year, is displayed. On entering the large, airy room, decked with fern and fragrant with lily-of-the-valley from the convent garden, the visitor's eye is at once caught by the very beautiful display of hand-painted china. "350 pieces in all," said the kindly sister, who has so ably instructed her clever pupils, "and all burnt in our own kiln." A most exquisite dinner set, in palest green, with a dainty pattern, 97 pieces in all, was the work of Miss Simpson, whose clever brush had also decorated a dainty yellow supper set. Charming tea sets were the work of Misses Annie Whalen, Cecile Bernier, Isabel Gourder, Alma LeClair, Bessie Simpson and Josephine Kaminski. Miss Norah O'Connor, a young daughter of Dr. Ferguson O'Connor, has some really remarkably clever work on exhibition, china and some dainty marine scenes, and a sepia drawing of Martello tower that many an older artist might be proud of. Miss Grace Davis, another talented small girl, and Miss Marion Sullivan have also produced some good work.

The English pen painting on silk and on ivory is very good, as also are the works in oil and water colors. Miss Hilda Kaminski's Indian scene being most realistic. Dainty toilet sets, trays and a beautiful cocoa set were much admired, as were the studies from life and from plaster casts all showing patience and skill on the part of teacher and pupils. Next the visitor was taken to see the work of the little girls of five and six in paper, card board, etc., and very neatly executed it was by tiny fingers. The junior third class had made themselves lace and embroidered aprons, the senior third class had hemstitched and initialled towels and made more elaborate aprons. The junior fourth class will wear neatly made under-garments with fine stitching, and the high schools girls had embroidered night dresses, made crochet yokes, knitted sweaters and embroidered table linen, even some pretty gingham frocks were the work of these young needle women, who excel in this womanly art.
