AERIAL PAGEANT.

In Aid of the Royal Air Force Memorial Fund.

London, July 2.—Canadians here are taking a keen interest in the Aerial Pageant, in aid of the Royal Air Force Memorial Fund, to be held at Hendon, Saturday. A large number of Canadian flyers served in the Royal Air Force during the war and interest has been added to the event through the fact that they will participate in the benefits. Last year the pageant provided $75,000 for the fund and it is expected that a greater amount will be realized this year...

Many sides of warfare in the air will be depicted by skilled flyers including lightning in the air, air raids and a realistic and elaborately staged representation of the bombing of a village by a fleet of airships. Royalty will be in attendance at the spectacle. The object for which the fund is being established, include the building of a monument; the establishment of places of education for the children of airmen and assistance for officers and men of the force during sickness. Of the 400,000 pounds sterling needed, about 1-3 has been raised. The fund was started on the initiative of Air-Marshal Sir Hugh Trenchard, to commemorate the services during the war of the Royal Flying Corps, to which all Canadian airmen were attached; the Australian Flying Corps; the Naval Air Service and the Royal Air Force.

Henry Bosenberry, mayor of Pincher Creek, Alta., was last night nominated in contest the Pincher Creek riding as Liberal candidate. Conclusive evidence given at Leipzig trial that Germans murdered millions during the war.

RECORD CROP IN THE WESTERN PROVINCES. Believed This Year's Harvest Will Be Greater Ever Known. Toronto, July 2.—Prospects for a record grain crop in the three prairie provinces are very bright, according to reports received by the Canadian National Railways, and it is believed that this year's harvest will break the highest record. While the acreage this year is estimated at 18,250,000, or 17,626 over the acreage last year, it is thought this year's yield will show an increase of well over 100,000,000 bushels, the Canadian National Railways' head office here states, provided no serious setback occurs. Current reports of drought covering the territory in Southern Alberta and the southwestern corner of Saskatchewan not served by the C.N.R., are causing some apprehension, according to C.N.R. reports, but this area is small compared to the vast acreage throughout the three prairie provinces where favorable growing weather prevails. Measures taken by the Entomological Branch of the Dominion department of agriculture has prevented any serious damage to crops by grasshoppers, and only twenty-four places out of a total of 324 in the west are reported as having suffered from the grasshoppers. A combination of bran, sawdust, arsenic, molasses and salt or fruit is proving an effective poisoned bait for this parasite.

OLDEST AMERICAN BANK.

Institution at Yorktown Dates Back to English Days.

Within twenty miles of where the first English settlement in America was made at Jamestown is the scene where Capt. John Smith records the story of his rescue by Pocahontas, the daughter of the Indian chief, Powhatan. Within a circle of twenty miles is to be found the oldest Protestant church in America; the kitchen where Martha Washington cooked in good colonial style; the college which has graduated three Presidents; Brutus Church, in which more men of historical importance have worshipped than in any other church in America—and Yorktown, where Cornwallis surrendered to Washington.

Although Yorktown has a population of less than two hundred, it has two banks, both of which are working in what are probably the two oldest buildings used for banks in America. One of these banks, operating under state and trust company laws, is housed in the historic oldest custom-house built in America—erected in 1715. Here the ships for Philadelphia were once compelled to enter and clear. Here at one time was the gathering place of the financiers of the early colonists. Wall Street has taken away the financiers, but has left the same old building with its same old walls of English brick.

To-day the cashier welcomes the visitor with true Virginia hospitality. There is no rush—nobody hurries in Yorktown. Every one has all day to-morrow not yet touched. Friendliness and hospitality are more important in Yorktown and Virginia than profits—except when some outside profiteer has entered upon his field of work in Virginia. The average Virginian thinks more of the past than of the future and more of friendship than of profits. The modern automobile is doing more to change the Virginian from his good old easy-going way than anything else in America.

Just across the street from the old custom building is another building housing the work of the First National Bank of Yorktown. The town and surrounding country are so prosperous that there seems plenty of business for two banks. The building appears more quaint and ancient than even the custom-house building erected in 1715.

Both of the buildings are priceless souvenirs of a past age and time of colonial glory. To change the outlines of either would seem like sacrilege and disloyalty to the Colonial Fathers. It is well that they are used as banking institutions until such time as wealthy lovers of history shall buy them and hand them over for preservation to some historical society.

King George's Family Name. "What is the King of England's name?" is a question that is often asked. On this point, "The Private Life of King Edward VII." says: "It is a popular error to suppose that the surname of the Prince of Wales is Guelph because that is the family name of the house of Brunswick, from which the present sovereign is descended. When the Queen (Victoria) married, she, by the law of the land, changed her name, as do the humblest of her subjects. The Prince Consort, who came from the house of Saxony, bore the surname of Wettin, and the Queen by marriage with him took that name. The Prince of Wales, therefore, and his children, though Guelph by descent, are really Wettin by name." This surname, however, was changed by a royal decree, issued in 1817, which reads: "Our house and family shall be styled and known as the House and Family of Windsor, and all descendants in the male line of our grandmother, Queen Victoria, who are subjects of these realms, other than the female descendants who may marry, or have married, shall bear the same name of Windsor."

Where Trees Are Milked. In British Guiana and the West Indies, particularly on the banks of the River Demerara, there grows a tree known to the natives as the "Hyahya," which yields from its bark and pith a juice slightly richer and thicker than cow's milk. The tree is about forty feet in height and eighteen inches in circumference when full grown, and the natives use its juice as we do milk, it being perfectly harmless and mixing well with water. The Cingalese, who call it "Kiriguma," which yields a fluid in all respects like milk, while in the forest of Para grows a tree called the "Massendendron," which gives an indefinitely richer and shows no tendency to become sour. On the other hand, certain trees in the valleys of Aragua and in Canaguaya yield a similar fluid, which, when exposed to the air, begins to form a kind of cheese which very soon becomes sour. In the Canary Islands there is a tree called "Tahaya Dolce," of which the milk, thickened into a jelly, is considered a delicacy.

"Me and the Prince." A friend of King George tells an amusing story about one of his Majesty's body servants. The servant was explaining an incident that had recently taken place. "Me and the prince—" he began, when the King's secretary stopped him. "You should say 'the prince and I,'" he observed. The man gazed at him for a moment and then replied: "I beg your pardon, sir, but I did not know you were there at all. However, 'you and me and the prince—'"
