London, July 13 .- The arriving Irish delegates were met by a crowd of several hundred, including of ficers and members of the Irish selfdetermination league, headed by Art O'Brien and his wife, who are to superintend the entertainment of the delegation while it is in London.

Deafening cheers resounded the moment De Valera stepped from his compartment, his admirers crowding and pushing forward in a mass in their eagerness to grasp his hand. Eventually, a squad of police rescued him from the attentions of his enthusiastic friends and escorted him to his motor car, in company with Mr. and Mrs. O'Brien. The republican leader's clothing suffered during the jam, and his hat was lost but ultimately was recovered All the members of the greeting party were the Sinn Fein emblems of the league and bore a huge green banner. There were vociferous calls for a speech, to which the Irish lead-
