was considered the height of frivolity; now they are just as much standard.

One of our own great American dressmaking establishments is showing a new green crepe de chine evening dress which illustrates effectively the new vogue for simplicity. The bodice is absolutely plain, the décolletage slightly low and cut straight across the skirt short and full with no ruffling. The feature of the dress is a wide scarf of brown lace encircling the waist and knotted at the left side. The ends are very long, one falling a few inches on the floor.

Laces of Every Pattern and Tint.

It is safe to predict a continued vogue for laces. There is every indication that they will play an important part in dress this summer as they did last year. The lace-making industry has received great impetus from this continued demand and lace-makers have been constantly renewing their efforts to produce even more beautiful things. Whether the furor over laces is propaganda for this line of work, which was almost ruined during the early years of the recent war, or whether the fashion for clothes made of lace has stimulated lace-making are matters over which we need not concern ourselves. They are certain to the trade. The things that interest the woman of fashion or the woman who likes to be suitably and prettily dressed is the fact that laces still are very much in the present-day fashion picture and that she has an almost inexhaustible variety of colors and patterns from which to choose.

Frocks of lace have become simpler and even more charming than ever. Much crepe de chine is used in combination with lace. Such a union makes a garment which is soft and clinging, so that this fabric is more suitable as a foundation over which to drape soft filmy nets than any of the heavier silks.

Black Lace, White Crepe de Chine.

White crepe de chine and black lace is a well liked combination in exclusive dressmaking circles. Women appear loath to abandon the vogue for black and white which came upon us so suddenly and ran such a rapid course that in the natural order of things its existence should have been a brief one. Its long life, however, is no doubt due to the fact that black and white is practical, filling many needs in both the limited and the extensive wardrobe—and, used in conjunction with each other, is likewise becoming to almost all women.

Crepe de chine frequently consorts with satin in the newest models turned out by the great French dressmakers. Gray and black is a favorite combination in many of these new costumes.

One designer makes a very simple chemise dress of gray satin trimmed only by a sash of the satin, which is embroidered in bright colors and silver.

SO WEAK SO NERVOUS

How Miserable This Woman Was Until She Took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Toombsboro, Ga.—“I suffered terribly with backache and headache all the time, was so weak and nervous I didn't know what to do, and could not do my work. My trouble was deficient and irregular periods. I read in the paper what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had done for others and decided to give it a trial. I got good results from its use so that I am now able to do my work. I recommend your Vegetable Compound to my friends who have troubles similar to mine and you may use these facts as a testimonial.”—Mrs. C. F. PHILLIPS, Toombsboro, Ga.

Weak, nervous women make unhappy homes, their condition irritates both husband and children. It has been said that nine-tenths of the nervous prostration, nervous dependency, “the blues,” irritability and backache arise from some displacement or derangement of a woman's system. Mrs. Phillips' letter proves that no other remedy is so successful as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Ribbons in Brilliant Hues.

Callot shows great partiality for the ribbon sash, and her liking for gorgeous fabrics is seen in the sort of ribbons she selects. Usually she prefers those of heavy quality and elaborate weave. Through her sashes she achieves marvelous color effects. A Callot sash with stiff, looped ends is of heavy reversible ribbon, grosgrain on one side and satin on the other, and features brilliant shades of greens and blues. The loops may be worn at the back or they may be placed at one side in panel effect and the girdle knotted at the other.

This method of allowing bits of ribbon or panels of silk to hang at either side of the dress, and, in many instances, fall below the hem is a favorite with many designers. While it has been used for some time, new variations of it are constantly appearing.

It is a gold-colored crepe de chine chemise with cascading sides. A straight piece of the silk is cut out at the sides to form sleeves in one with the body of the frock, which is slightly girdled at the waistline by a very narrow belt. A piece of the material is attached to the underarm seam and the free edges, which are picot finished, allowed to ripple down the sides in twisting cascades. The trimming consists of rows of double hemstitching, done by hand. There are three on the skirt and one around the bodice. The same sort of stitching finishes the neck and sleeves.

Lace seems a perishable material for a sash, but nevertheless it has been chosen to play its part in girdling the frocks which go to make up the mode. Some of our prettiest dresses have no trimming other than a huge lace sash, which, if the frock is intended for formal wear, may end in a train, thus doing double duty.

FASHION NOTES

It is not unlikely that the soft felt hat, untrimmed except for a single large flower, that Paris introduced for early spring wear, will be utilized all summer, for these soft felts are most comfortable for sport wear.

The campus coat made of camel's hair is a slip-on V-neck sweater that is new and fast meeting with favor. These smart sweaters come in all the popular colors, are plain knit and in waistline length that makes them particularly desirable for wear under the sport suit.

The knitted scarf daily gains in favor, for it is the logical neckpiece to wear with the sport or general utility spring suit. Scarfs of striped knitted silk give a delightful color note to the practical suit, as do scarfs of brushed wool designed in two-color block effect.

Pin-check gingham is a favored material for little girls' summer play-time frocks. Many of these practical little frocks are made exceedingly smart by a good-taste placement of embroidery done in black; others are made very dainty, yet more or less tailored in effect by collar and cuffs, belt and pocket flaps of white pique.

Many novelty effects in veils are being used, and the long-made veil seems to be enjoying more favor than the square-shaped veil. Chantilly lace veils are being accepted to a greater degree than earlier in the season, and the veil with chenille and silk border, done in contrasting color is exceedingly popular with smart women. Veils as part of the hat trimming were an early spring fashion introduced by French milliners. Now separate veils are being worn in similar manner on ready-to-wear hats, draped to suit the wearer's idea of individual requirements. Considerably more color than usual is seen in veils and veiling generally, which makes for a pleasing change.
