Gifts for Miss Currie.
The Presbyterian Witness of August 4th says: "On Friday evening, July 22nd, the W. M. S. Auxiliary of St. Andrew's church, Sonya, and friends, met for a farewell and presentation to Miss Christina Currie, who is leaving for work in the Korean field. Mrs. Nell Wilkinson presided and Miss Currie told in an effective way the story of her call to the work. Mrs. Mason, in the presentation address, told how Miss Currie's grandfather, Rev. Archibald Currie, ministered to St. Andrew's through half a century and ended his days here, his widow still being one of the honorary members of the W. M. S. Her father, Rev. Peter Currie, was raised and trained here and is a frequent visitor. The bonds of affection created by the years and also by the earnest, sincere and winning character of Miss Currie will long be a close bond between her and the Sonya congregation. Mrs. Wilkinson buckled on the beautiful wrist watch and Doris Williamson of the Mission Band presented a bouquet."

All Girls Are Beautiful

G.H.O.T. in Bracebridge Gazette

Some fellow, probably one who was jilted by a pretty girl, sent me a clipping giving an employer's opinion of office girls. This employer is very sore on girls who bleach or bob their hair or powder their noses. He says "Business researches have proven that 90 per cent of the blondes are useless. All women who bob their hair are useless. Some say they have cut their hair to avoid the heat, but there are hotter places waiting for them. I can tolerate the woman who lays aside her corsets. That is comfort." Now I can assure my unknown correspondent that the foregoing opinion does not make any impression on me. Girls are good or not quite so good, efficient or inefficient, not according to color of hair or eyes, not on account of bobbed hair or hidden ears, not on account of height or breadth, not because they do or do not wear corsets, but just because they do or do not do their jobs well. If I were a girl in want of a job I would feel more hopeful if I were dressed in the prevailing fashion. In a long and observant life I have seen girls dressed in many ways, have even seen them wear more dress than they do now, have seen them with frizzed hair, smooth hair, one long curl, all curls, banged on the forehead and banged fore and aft, shingled hair, crimped hair, rats, ear knobs, Dutch cuts and the present-day bobs, and I thought and still think them all beautiful. I have seen them wear skirts short and gradually got longer and longer until they had to be held up in walking; have seen them gradually shorten and shorten even until now, when Mary clearly shows that though she had a little lamb she has a fair-sized calf, and I thought they always, in all stages, looked beautiful. I have passed through the periods of Grecian bands puffed sleeves, hoops and pautiers, and thought them all beautiful. I have seen costumes that left much to imagination and some that left but little, and thought them all beautiful. Naturally I never knew whether corsets were worn or not. And at all stages and in all styles I have found girls very willing workers, very honest, very efficient. I would prefer, if I were employing office girls, to have them look their prettiest according to the prevailing fashions. I think this is very important in lady school teachers. Even after fifty years I can remember how we little kids used to admire the dainty shoes my first lady teacher wore. She used to make us sit on her platform for punishment and we used to sit and admire her pretty feet all the time we were there. Sure, girls, you will only be young once. All your lives you will be gladder that you kept yourselves sweet and pretty than that you saved two victory bonds.
