

Theatrical

To-Night "The Skin Game" William A. Brady, in association with the Reardon Company, of London, will present "The Skin Game," John Galsworthy's internationally successful play, at the Grand theatre.

The production is a duplicate of the one which was seen for over a year at St. Martin's theatre, London, and the cast of English players has been selected by Basil Dean, the English manager, with the entire approval of Galsworthy himself.

"The Skin Game" comes here after long and brilliantly successful engagements in London, it has recently concluded a year's engagement, and it comes here after having duplicated in New York the triumph it achieved on its original production in England.

Described by Galsworthy as a tragic-comedy, "The Skin Game" is a brilliantly written, intensely interesting, wholly human play of class conflict. Its appeal is universal, applicable alike to America, England, or wherever men are striving to accomplish their ends, and the old order clashes with the new.

The feud between the Hillierists and the Hornblowers, and its tragic consequences for all concerned, is dramatically disclosed by Galsworthy in a play which adds new lustre to one of the most famous names in contemporary English literature.

The action of the play passes in a remote country district in England. There in Mr. Hillier's study, on his estate—the estate which was his father's before him, and on which generations of Hillierists have lived in peace and comfort, one meets the aristocratic Hillierists and learns of the threatened encroachment on their estate by the potteries of the vulgar, bustling, self-made Hornblowers.

Hornblower is a comparative newcomer to the community, a man who has become rich and powerful through his own efforts, and who brooks no interference with his will. The Hillierists have refused to recognize the Hornblowers as a part of the social life of the countryside, and it is when Hornblower announces his intention to evict some tenants of Hillierist, and to build on the site of the small house they have long occupied, a new factory, that war between the families breaks out. The story moves swiftly and dramatically to its inevitable climax.—Advt.

"Fair and Warmer." The date for "Fair and Warmer" is growing nearer. On Thursday night the Rex Stock Company will play the Avery Hopwood farce, together with the usual vaudeville acts. A very clever specialty by Mr. William Yule will be an added feature of the programme, and judging by its popularity with the "Grand" patrons, he should win added laurels during this engagement. By special request he will give a recitation entitled "Sweet Home," by Fyfe D. K. It is a humorous thing which an understudy scope for Mr. Yule's dramatic ability, giving vein of earnestness, giving ample scope for his dramatic ability. As a farce "Fair and Warmer" holds an unique place among others of its kind. The play is a splendid vehicle for Mr. and Mrs. Snelgrove. Handled less skillfully, it might not hold the place it does in the field of good comedy, but Miss Zana Vaughn displays so much refinement in all her work that, together with our "polite comedienne," Rex, the combination is hailed everywhere as the greatest triumph of the Rex Stock Company. The play will be given Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights, with a special matinee on Saturday.—Advt.

An Old Time Laugh. "Charley's Aunt" is coming revised and re-edited and yet more overflowing with laughter than ever. The Grand Opera House is the place and the date is Monday evening, Oct. 3rd. You're laughing until your sides ache and there's some when Charley's Aunt (Tom Brazil) arrives on the scene and a million laughs will follow. A hearty laugh beats all doctor's medicine as the saying goes. An excellent cast has been secured by William C. Grow, the producer, and also a splendid scenic equipment, all new and brilliant, is carried to enhance the natural highlights of the comedy hit of the season.—Advt.

Ralph Connor's "Sky Pilot." A human-interest story backed up by dramatic incidents which climax in a mad cattle stampede is "The Sky Pilot," which will be shown for a three day engagement at the Albee theatre, beginning to-morrow. The story is taken from Ralph Connor's book of the same title. King Vidor, as director of this Catharine Curtis production, has faithfully carried out the sentiment of this popular novel and has taken care that the film version of the story maintains the comely human vein as well as the dramatic incidents that mark the film as one of the most interesting and exciting of the year. There is no doubt that the scenes of the cattle stampede in which 4,000 panicking animals are seen dashing madly on toward the form of the helpless little ranch girl will forever remain in the minds of movie fans. Fearing that the excited animals would bowl over his cameramen and ripods regardless of how strong his platform might be, King Vidor decided to film the scenes from a pit eight feet in the ground, ten feet long and five feet wide. Thus it was that he was able to picture the cattle over the "Sky Pilot" from the prostrate body of the crippled ranch girl. John Bowers plays the part of "The Sky Pilot," with Colleen Moore as Gwen; David Butler as the ranch foreman, and others in the cast are Harry Todd, Kathleen Kirkham,

Donald MacDonald and James Corrigan. The production is an Associated First National attraction.—Advt.

At the Strand.

An all-star cast, a story of exceptional strength, several settings of great scenic beauty and historic interest—such as the Henley Regatta, the Tower of London, and the St. Bernard Monastery in the Alps, and excellence in all the other departments that make a great motion picture, go to make "The Fatal Hour," which will be screened at the Strand for the first time to-morrow, a photograph that Kingston film fans will be eager to see.

Based on a melodrama that impressed society, "The Marriages of Mayfair," one of Cecil Raleigh's masterpieces, the story of "The Fatal Hour" is dynamic with pulse-quickening action. It is superfluous to say that the cast rises to the heights of the splendid opportunities of the play. Wilfred Lytell, brother of Bert Lytell, is one of the players, adding another fine interpretation to those which have proved him worthy to bear a famous stage name.

It is difficult to decide which is pre-eminent, the plot with its keen, never-failing action, or the supremely lovely photographic work of scenes in England and Switzerland. The result is a marvelous bit of work that holds the spectator spell-bound. "The Fatal Hour" narrates the struggle of Nigel Villiers to recover his title and estate, of which he has been deprived by two schemers, a burlesque actress and a gentleman adventurer. The high points revolve around a secret mission to Switzerland, the robbery of crown jewels, an abduction in a motor car, and a death struggle near the edge of a precipice.

The rest of the Strand programme for the last three days of the week is varied and interesting, as this popular theatre secures the best in screen products for the entertainment of Kingstonians.—Advt.

A SEAT FOR DRAYTON.

Premier May Ask North Toronto to Provide It. The Toronto Globe says: Premier Meighen may personally have to find a seat for Sir Henry Drayton, and may ask North Toronto to nominate the finance minister.

Sir Henry, since his appointment to the dominion cabinet, has been sitting for Kingston, but for the general election the Conservatives there have made other arrangements. They have picked Brig.-Gen. Ross, the provincial member, and will nominate him for the commons. The choice has even been made of a party candidate at the bye-election for the retirement of Gen. Ross. The man is Mayor Nickle, of Kingston.

This is the information that has been conveyed to the district office of the Tory organization, and Hon. Edmund Bristol, in charge of organization, cannot offer any solution. None of the rural ridings seem to want an outside man, and the only hope is North Toronto.

The declaration from Toronto Tories that no "gypsy politicians" are wanted in this city has been heard at Ottawa, and the prime minister will hesitate to interfere unless he finds it absolutely necessary.

It may be urged on behalf of Sir Henry Drayton that he is a Toronto boy, having been corporation counsel for the city, and county crown attorney. His father, P. H. Drayton, chairman of the court of revision, is still a resident of this city.

B. J. HANLON HONORED.

The Letter Carriers Gave Him a Present. Branch No. 8, Federated Association of Letter Carriers, held a meeting in the Labour Hall last evening to receive the report of their delegate, George Compton, who attended the annual convention in Montreal. After the report a very pleasant event took place, when B. J. Hanlon, who is retiring from the service was presented with an address setting forth the regret with which his fellows parted from him. For twenty-five years or more, they pointed out, he had given good and faithful service to the department, and had acted as secretary-treasurer of the local association for a number of years, in which position he gave valuable assistance to the cause. The address also expressed the ardent wish that he would be spared for many years to enjoy that degree of rest to which his long and faithful service had entitled him. A smoking set was then presented to Mr. Hanlon as a small token of remembrance and appreciation, after which a social evening was spent, with refreshments and smokes. The Kingston branch is in a very flourishing condition, both financially and otherwise.

SILVER FOX FARMING IN FRONTENAC COUNTY

Soon to Be Made a Reality by Alaska Silver Fox Company, Limited.

Prominent business gentlemen have taken a substantial financial interest in the project, realizing that silver fox farming is a very important industry, which deserves endorsement and encouragement throughout the province of Ontario.

Evidence is available which proves conclusively that silver fox farming has long since passed the experimental stage. No longer is the industry considered speculative, but rather is one of our most attractive and remunerative investments.

Kingstonians are therefore offered for the first time an industry capable of unlimited possibilities, endorsed and encouraged by the governments of Canada and the United States, supported by local gentlemen of unquestionable integrity, who place themselves on record as recommending the project to their fellow citizens.

The supply of fur-bearing animals is gradually decreasing everywhere, with the exception of the extreme north, and this decrease is concurrent with a constantly increasing demand for the highest priced and finest quality of furs.

From the dawn of history in this country, the fur trade has been one of its leading branches of commerce, and has played an important part in the advance of discovery and exploration. It has an annual value of many millions of dollars. Extensive trapping is gradually reducing the number of the most valuable fur-bearers, some of which appear to be rapidly nearing extinction.

The only practical proposal yet made for the preservation of valuable species and for meeting the continually increasing demand for the higher quality of furs, seems to be the raising in captivity of fur-bearing animals upon the same lines as the farming of domestic cattle.

Fur farming is no longer an experiment, at least so far as foxes, mink, skunk and muskrat are concerned. Unless these animals are raised in captivity in considerable numbers, they will be unable in the not-far-distant future to hold their own against the constantly increasing number of trappers and fur dealers.

The province of Ontario is very favorably situated for fur farming. The most valuable fur-bearing animals can only bring their pelts to the highest state of perfection in the cold climates. The eminent naturalist, Mr. Ernest Thompson Seton, referring to this object in a recent letter, says: "This is an industry which interests Canada ultimately more than it does any other part of America, because for the perfection of fur, the animals, whether wild or captive, must be grown in a cold climate. I can see enormous possibilities for this work. I think that within ten years every enterprising Canadian farmer will have a small fur annex in his barn-yard, and on the waste of the barn-yard and the house raise valuable furs, enough to double his income."

Of course, the old fashioned idea of raising furs on an island or on a tract of country fenced in for the purpose where the animals are allowed to run loose, is utterly abandoned, except in the case of huge parks or of proprietors of vast territories such as the island of Anticosti. The only way to do it successfully is in comparatively small enclosures with individual attention to each and every animal. This shows it to be particularly suited for the Canadian farmer. The amount of ground needed for such an enterprise is very small. It will doubtless prove interesting to mention here, one of those who have been successful in fur-farming under conditions less favorable than those existing in this Province.

Hon. Chas. A. Dalton, of Tignish, P. E. I., was one of the pioneers in the industry, out of which he has accumulated a large fortune. Commencing more than a score of years ago with two Silver Black foxes, he has cleared as much as $42,000 of net profit in one year out of his ranch and in 1912 formed a joint stock company to take over his fox raising property and stock at a valuation of $60,000.

We have in the Kingston district a very interesting record of the possibilities in fox farming by Messrs. Pardy Brothers, Murvale, twelve miles north of the city of Kingston. On December 1st, 1920, they purchased from Fred M. Lee, of Edmonton, Alberta, four pairs of 1920 pups. These gentlemen were totally inexperienced in the art of fur farming at the time of taking delivery, but by following instructions carefully they have been rewarded with success, the four mothers having presented them with twenty-two pups, all of which are strong and healthy aristocratic specimens, an average of five and one-half to the litter. The location of their ranch is ideal. The accommodation provided is ordinary, standard equipment. The sanitation of their ranch has been carefully looked after and in this together with their method of feeding lies the foundation of their success.

WANTS HUGE GRAIN POOL

(Continued from Page 1.) said that he did not want free trade. "Perhaps he does not want all duties off on every class of goods, but if he means that platform he means that there must be no duties left that are protective duties—that is, no duties left on goods that are made in this country. You can have customs duties on goods not made in this country, and that does not mean protection at all. That is merely a tariff for the sale of revenue, whatever revenue it would bring. But this platform of Wood and Crerar denounces protective duties of every kind, and if protection of every kind is wrong, then he should not have protection. It is all humbug to talk about getting rid of something that is wrong by easy stages.

Can't Single Out Industries. "What is the sense of singling out great and vital, indeed fundamental, industries of this country and stripping them bare of every shred of protection and leaving those far less important, far less vital to the country, enjoying any measure of protection? Such a course of conduct is indefensible from any standpoint whatever. It never was tried in any country, and it cannot be a success in Canada. The case between the policy of the country for the past forty years and the Wood-Crerar platform is a case between protection and no protection—and it is that case this country is going to decide when it votes at this election.

"You can have protection or you can have no protection whatever, and that is what England had for many years until just lately. These two alternatives you can choose from, but you certainly cannot have on one side a discriminatory, contented system that penalizes and probably destroys over half the vital industries of the country and then pretend to leave the others untouched. What we have to decide is this: Are we going to continue the protective system of this country, or are we not? That is the question, and that is the whole question, and the great big necessary thing is that every voter in this country, from the Yukon to Halifax, knows that that is the question he or she is deciding when he or she votes in this great contest."

Can't Reserve the Tariff. There never was a time when the people of Canada were more overwhelmingly in favor of maintaining a protective system for this country than they were to-day. "If the people want any other proof of that surely the speeches just delivered in Quebec by Mr. Lemieux, the speeches of Mr. Taschereau, the speeches of Mr. Fielding, the speeches of Dr. Beland, the speeches of practically every man who led the Liberal convention in framing the platform two years ago, would convince them of the truth of what I say.

"To start in at this date to reverse Canada's tariff policy and abandon the protective system would be, to my mind, an obvious and arrant act as intelligent nation."

Wets Abroad Organize To Fight Dry Invaders

Lausanne, Switzerland, Sept. 28.—A commission to fight again an invasion of Europe of an international prohibition movement originating in the United States was appointed by the international anti-prohibition congress at its closing session here to-day.

The necessity for the "wets" to work in close co-operation to prevent dry forces gaining the ascendancy in Europe was the sole topic of the day. The commission is composed of two delegates from each country represented in the congress. It will call an international meeting in London as soon as practicable.

Russia Faces Disaster As Winter Draws Near

New York, Sept. 28.—A pessimistic picture of conditions in Russia was painted by Count Frederick Moltke, who arrived here to-day on the Scandinavian-American liner Frederick VIII. Count Moltke came on an special mission to the Danish legation in Washington. "If the whole world were to go to the aid of Russia in the way the United States has," said the count, "it would be too late to avert disaster this winter. The Volga region is already almost inaccessible, such is the condition of its roads. Before the winter is over there will be deaths by famine there that will stagger the world. Other sections of Russia are but little better off. The Russians can stand cold and they can stand hunger for a time, but they cannot stand both together, which they must face this winter."
