NOVEL DESCRIPTION OF YANK'S THIRD VICTORY

Something Out of the Ordinary on the Fifth Game of World's Series.

New York writer says: It is barely possible there are some people who do not understand baseball. For the benefit of those whose knowledge is limited to some other form of sport, Monday's world series game will be described so that every man, woman and child will know to-day that the Yankees beat the Giants 3 to 1.

In a manner of speaking, the Yanks put one over on the Giants. Battling Babe Ruth missed three straight left swings at young Art Nehf in the first round and was counted out by Referee Rigler.

Right-half Bob Meusel started an end run in the second period, shook off Left-end Frisch, who attempted to block him, but was tackled by Centre "Red" Smith and thrown before he reached the goal. Meantime, Field Judge Moriarity ruled Mike Gonzales was off-side and ejected him to the side lines.

In the second set the Giants broke through Hoyt's service and made the count one love, Frisch's and Kelly's stroking being particularly effective. The Giants had a nice pair to draw to in the third hand, but Hoyt dealt them off the bottom of the deck and they lost their ante. After that, whenever they tried to bluff the Yankees always called them.

In the fourth inning Bob Meusel banked the cue ball off the side rail and two balls dropped in the pockets for the Yanks.

Mike McNally tried to shoot a basket in deep centre in that half, but was blocked by Centre George Burns' fine footwork.

Kelly made a splendid approach shot on the sixth hole. He was stymied at the second green, how-

FATHER OF EVERY MOVE OF GIANTS

Has a Wonderful Code of Signals for Men—Directs the Play.

Crouched down on the players' bench at the Polo grounds on Tuesday in a spot where no spectators can see him sits the guy that runs the world series.

No ball is served to a Yankee batter in a crucial moment that he does not order it. No Giant batter strikes at a ball in a crucial moment without his instructions.

He is the reason that Babe Ruth has fanned eight times. He orders every ball—high, low, curve, fast or slow—that is served to the Bambino.

He is the Mastermind. He is the Works. He is John J. McGraw, manager of the Giants, the unsung hero of the series, who has perfected the greatest wireless signal system ever devised and through it he dictates every move of his nine players every minute in the game.

Exactly thirty-nine times in the fifth game the Giants' players interrupted the play on the field to ask him what to do.

At the bat the Giants turn around to him after every ball, in the crucial moments and get orders. In the field he relays his signals through the catchers, Smith or Snyder.

Here is the score by innings of the fifth game, showing the number of times each half inning that the Giants turned to him for instructions:

Yanks at bat: 223 502 020—16
 Giants 223 502 044—23

In the first inning he scored the Giants' one run. With one strike and one ball on him, Kelly looked over to the bench inquisitively. A yellow cap was background has been set up on the benches so the players may see his signals more easily. The silent order came back to swat the next one and Kelly arched it into center field for a single, scoring Bancroft.

Invariably he ordered a low curve for Babe. Ruth fanned three times during the game.

Nearing Record

With at least two more games to be played, new financial records are certain to be made in the present world series struggle between the Killies and the Giants on Tuesday.

34,283 spectators paid $112,234. This gives a total attendance of 208,063 for six games, and a total gate of $685,807, which is within $36,607 of the record total for the full eight games series between Cincinnati and Chicago in 1919.

Now that the players have ceased to share in the profits of the series, the club owners' dividends are mounting rapidly, the aggregate share for six games being $290,413.72. The club owners' share Tuesday was $95,398.90, and that of the advisory board, $16,835.10, making a grand total to date of $102,871.03 for the latter.

Queen's Rugby Renaissance. Ottawa Journal: The rugby renaissance of Queen's is the sole topic of conversation among the devotees of the fall game. They are all hoping that the tricolor will win this year. Even Shag said Queen's had a good team, and with the rough spots rubbed off they may work up to the top of the pack. George Awrey, their coach, has made good off the break. He is a football mentor of ability, and last year brought the Tiger Cubs to the threshold of the Dominion championship.

The White Sox retained their title as Chicago champions by defeating the Cubs 9 to 5 on Monday. It was the fifth consecutive victory for the American Leaguers, the Nationals' failing to win a game.

More Bouquets

Here is part of what the Belleville Ontario has to say about Saturday's big game:

"A good winner is to be admired, but a good loser more so, and the latter fits Queen's to a nicety. This may be Queen's year to cop the college honors. If it is they will get the hearty congratulations of all fans."

"Coming as it did with the opening of the new Richardson Stadium—and it is a beauty—the victory could not have been more fitting. The stage was set for Queen's and they put the act across. If Queen's does not win the college title, then Toronto fans will at least hope they hand McGill the same dose as Varsity. And those who witnessed Saturday's contest claim that much will happen when Shag's clan visit the Limestone City. What a nice race it will be if all three teams win at home and lose away. A triple tie and then two play-offs."

TWO MCGILL STARS OUT

Some More of the Good Old Bankum—Flanagan and McGregor Down. The first blow to the McGill team's hopes for the championship came Monday, when Flanagan, their star halfback was sent to the hospital suffering from blood poisoning. As soon as it was found that the player was ill he was rushed to the hospital and it is hoped the prompt action taken will allow him to return to the game before the end of the week. He will not be able to practice for the next few days at any rate.

"Doug" McGregor, who has been holding down the position of snaphack with the first team, failed to respond to the call for practice Monday afternoon and it was found that he was too sick and had not been out of bed over the week end. It is thought that neither of the men are really seriously ill but they are conserving their strength by quickly taking measures to prevent gaps in the team this week end.

Shaughnessy gave the squad a hard drilling in the mud. He started shortly after three o'clock and worked far into the night using a white ball when it became too dark to proceed with the ordinary pigskin. The men are in the best of condition at the present time and can stand any amount of driving on the part of the coach. Shaughnessy intends to keep after the men every day until they have mastered all of the signals and they are showing better form at every practice.

A great amount of time will be spent at defensive work as the coach was greatly impressed by the showing made by Varsity and Queen's half-lines on Saturday, and realizes that it will take a very strong defensive work to stop them when they get started. According to the plans of Shaughnessy at the present time the men will be given hard scrimmage workouts every day this week, finishing up with a light workout on Friday afternoon.

"Chick" Fewster, who took "Babe" Ruth's place in left field against the Giants yesterday in the sixth game of the baseball classic, and hit out a home run, as well as playing a sensational game in the field, stepped from the Baltimore Orioles into the American League three years ago as a potential $50,000 ball player. He was hit with a pitched ball from the hand of the powerful Pfeiffer, of Brooklyn, in an exhibition game down south in the Spring of 1920 and almost killed. He has a hole in his head, but his heart is quite intact. He played as Ruth's substitute Tuesday as well as the great Ruth himself could have played. When with the Orioles Fewster was a second baseman.

Not Quite So Bad

The Hamilton Spectator remarks that Queen's victory over University of Toronto is the first win for the Tricolor since 1908. Well, it's not quite as bad as that, as Queen's has beaten McGill, Ottawa, Collegiate, and R.M.C. many times since 1908.
