TOM MIX, ONE OF THE FINEST HORSEMEN ON THE SCREEN

WILLIAM BEVAN

MARY MILES MINTER AND MONTE BLUE IN "MOONLIGHT AND HONEYSUCKLE"

THOMAS MEIGHAN AND DORIS KENYON IN "THE CONQUEST OF CANAAN"

"The Conquest of Canaan"—"The Yellow Arm"—"The Son of Wallingford"—Spoiled Daughter of Ranchman—Tom Mix in New Picture.

The "Conquest of Canaan," Meighan is at his best.

In the town of Canaan lived two factions—one eminently respectable, led by Judge Marlin Pike, the other quite the opposite, represented by Joe Loudon. Brought up with the corrupt political ring of Bear Beach, Joe deduced the conventions of Canaan and was regarded as an irreclaimable outcast. Ariel Tabor, the village tomboy, shared Joe's fate and like him she is the laughing stock of the town.

One day her uncle dies, leaving her an ample fortune. She goes to Paris to study and her last word to Joe was "to make good in spite of them." Joe decides to make good and going to the next town, he begins the study of the law when necessity does not compel him to work in a restaurant.

Years pass. Joe has been admitted to the bar and opened an office in Canaan where he protects his ignorant friends at the Beach who are constantly in litigation. One day Ariel returns from abroad, beautiful and fashionably dressed. Joe watches the public reception in her honor, and his hesitation to speak to her prompts her to go to him and press some flowers in his hand. About this time a murder is committed, and Joe is engaged for the defense. He succeeds so well that he is acclaimed for mayor—and at the same moment, wins Ariel for his wife.

Priscilla Bonner

Priscilla Bonner will play the leading feminine role in "The Son of Wallingford." She was chosen as the perfect type for the small town girl who is wooed and won by the son of the famous, but notorious J. Rufus Wallingford.

Miss Bonner has appeared in leading roles in many important productions during the past year. Her appearance as Mary Curtis will mark the third production in succession in which she has played opposite Tom Mix. She plays the title role of Jimmy Wallingford. Miss Bonner will appear as a little country maid who is so easily won by the breezy, young, city-bred Jimmy Wallingford, but who finally is convinced that he is on the level and all he assumes to be.

"The Yellow Arm"

A fight to restore a Chinese throne by placing thereon its American heir, and involving two romances, stamps "The Yellow Arm" as a serial that is different, yet contains all the elements that make successful entertainment—adventure, mystery and romance.

There is thrilling, breath-catching plot and action in the efforts of the Orientals to kidnap Doris and Jack Bain, grandchildren of an American sea captain and a Chinese Princess, and heirs to the throne of the province of Pal-Shui, from their home in America and take them to China.

There is real heart-throb and sympathy for these two plucky children, who are but pawns in the hands of those who would use them for selfish political purposes and place them on a throne in a strange, faraway land. There is genuine courage in the voluntary assistance rendered by Suzanne Valette and Jerry Engleson, whose motives are actuated by a love of adventure, and a sincere desire to help a friend in need.

There is real drama in the life of Joel Bain, the man of fear, who is paying with heartaches, sorrow and anxiety, for the sins of his father.

And throughout the entire fifteen episodes there is deep heart interest in the love of Jerry for Suzanne, and of Alan Marsh for Doris; and the love of the father for his two children.

"Moonlight and Honeysuckle"

Miss Minter plays the role of a willful and spoiled daughter of a millionaire ranchman. The girl, tiring of ranch life, manoeuvres her father into politics and gets him elected to a Senatorship. Then they move to Washington, leaving the ranch manager desolate for love of Mistress Judith.

In Washington the young lady enjoys a whirlwind popularity. In fact, she has so many suitors she doesn't know what to do. Memories of Tod, the ranch manager, begin to fade under the glamour of the dress suit crowd she now runs with. But she cannot decide between her suitors, so hits upon the unique scheme of trial engagements. Several of them, simultaneously!

The plot thickens when the ranchman lover appears on the scene, armed with a six shooter, an engagement ring for Judith, and a grim determination. Judith triumphantly marries her father off to a convenient widow, breaks all the trial engagements, and accepts her Wild West swain. Washington then settles down to normalcy again.

Monte Blue plays the cowboy-lover. Colleen Moore

"Romance, mystery and adventure are in the air in this quaint old south," declares Colleen Moore, who is at present in Natchez, Mississippi. "It is simply thrilling to be down here among the scenes and the people who have always had a romantic interest for me," writes the chic Colleen to her northern friends.

"And the men are wonderful—such sweet manners and masterful ways; the women too talk more time to indulge in the delightful pastime of making themselves utterly charming and their hospitality is simply delightful. Imagine being taken into a garage lined with the feminine clothes and jewels and fans and handkerchiefs worn by the southern belles before the war. Such lace—it is like the thinnest of cobwebs and the limes and brocades are simply wonderful. I feel exactly as if I were in the pages of a book all the time and it is like a dream. I adore the people here; they have taken us all to their hearts and while I came down expecting to have a little rest—I have more engagements than I had in New York."

Tom Mix

Admirers of Tom Mix will be glad to know that he is soon to be seen in a sequel to "The Untamed," which was written by Max Brand. "The Untamed" was considered one of the best pictures Mix ever made, and the part of Whistling Dan Barry suited him exactly. In "The Untamed" quaint Whistling Dan had given up everything to follow the call of the wild geese to the north.

In his new picture, made under the title of "The Night Horsemen," Whistling Dan returns with the geese, and has a new set of adventures.

William Bevan

William Bevan, better known to comedy-lovers as Billy Bevan enjoys a long interesting perspective to his present matured comedy art. His skill as a low comedian has been identified for nearly three years with the Semart brand of picture hilarity, but it was not until Bevan appeared in "Heartburn" that the wild versatility of his acting art was revealed. In this picture Mr. Bevan proved himself the actor that he is and worthy the training he has enjoyed and the experience that has been his.

Billy Bevan's real name is William Bevan Harris, and he is a native of Australia.

RACING IN AUSTRALIA

Cupidon, the recent winner at Randwick, Sydney, of the Australian Jockey Club Derby of $30,000, the richest three-year-old race in the commonwealth, is a New Zealand horse by Martian—Debe, trained by R. J. Mason, the leading trainer in New Zealand. This is not the first time the Australian Jockey Club Derby has been won by a New Zealand horse. Mason, Cupidon's trainer, having effected many famous coups at Randwick in recent years, notably with Martian, sire of Cupidon, and Nootuliform, both owned by the late G. C. Stead. Nootuliform was a wonderful performer in Australia and New Zealand, was subsequently sold to race in England, but never became properly acclimatized, and was finally put to burdle racing. While thus engaged he broke his leg an ignominious end for a derby winner with an unbeaten record in Australia. Cupidon will probably go on to Melbourne to take part in the Victorian Derby, run at Flemington on the opening day of the Melbourne Cup meeting in November. It is probable that he will be well in the limelight for the cup itself, as this great race has been won many times by a derby winner.

EIGHTH HOLE-IN-ONE FOR PAT DOYLE, PRO. GOLFER

Pat Doyle, professional of the Deal Country Club, New York, holed out in one on the thirteenth hole at Deal in a match with Pierre Frol, former Princeton star. The distance from the tee to the green is 125 yards. He used a mashie niblick in making his shot which landed on the green six feet from the pin and rolled in. It was the eighth time in his career that Doyle has made an "ace."

MAULIFFE GOING TO IRELAND IN SEARCH OF RING MATERIAL

Jack McAuliffe, who enjoys the distinction of being the only undefeated ex-boxing champion, announced today that he would revisit the scenes of his childhood and make a search for new boxing material.

"The crop in this country, especially in the light and heavyweight divisions is getting poor," said McAuliffe, "and Ireland might as well produce the next champions. The boys do not scrap like they used to in my day. When they get hurt a little bit, they quit. I broke my hand in the tenth round of one of my fights and had to fight 35 more rounds before I could win."

American Girls to Enter. Miss Rosamund Sherwood, Stoney Brook, N. Y., announced that she would play in the British ladies' championship tournament next year. Miss Marion Hollins, holder of the United States woman golf title, also is expected to be a member of the American team invading England.

ARMOUR IN UNITED STATES

Brilliant Scottish Golfer Is Rated One of Best.

The latest topnotch golfer from the United Kingdom to decide to cast his lot with Uncle Sam is Tommy Armour, the brilliant young Edinburgh golfer, who at one time or another has held both the Scottish and French amateur crowns. Although falling to reach the top in the national championship at St. Louis, Armour is rated as one of the greatest golfers in the world and his decision to remain here is a decided loss for Britain and a gain for the United States. He is the third high light to come to America during the present year, the first being Robert Cruikshank, who turned professional and is now at the Essex Country Country Club, and the other, Willie Hunter, the British amateur champion. The British golf world is faced with the odd spectacle of its previous defenders against Americans invasions being members of future attacking parties.

Racing Finished

Horse racing on the Metropolitan circuit came to an end with the running of the final event at the Empire City track in Yonkers. A crowd of almost record proportions turned out to witness the lowering of the curtain on the sport.

Charles Stoneham's Yellow Hand established himself as the champion handicap horse of the season by scoring a triumphant victory in the Yorktown Stakes, the feature of the day. With the crushing impost of 132 pounds and conceding weight to the three horses which opposed him, the handsome son of Rosendale's Yellow Sea came through the stretch leading his field by open daylight and was given a great ovation as he flashed by the finish.
