

FIFTEEN BOILS ON NECK AT ONE TIME

Any one who has suffered from boils can sympathize with poor old Job. There was no Burdock Blood Bitters in those days, so Job had to suffer in silence. Now-a-days no one need endure the misery of boils.

BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS

and the blood will be cleansed of all its impurities, and then every boil will disappear. Mr. Roy McSwain, High Bank, P. E. I., writes: "I was troubled with boils for some time, and had as many as fifteen on my neck at once."

Do You Remember?

There is a memory to which you do not readily unlock the doors of heart and mind. It is that of the auction sale.

There was an early thrill of excitement in the first one you remember. But behind it was a feeling of which you could not give expression.

There was a queer clutching in your heart when someone started to sing a hymn beloved by Mother and Dad, "Blest be the tie that binds."

You have bought stock and furnishings at auction sales yourself since then. The drollery of auctioneers has made you laugh even when you were sorry for those who were breaking ties because circumstances had forced them.

Then you went back to Dad with an ache in your heart. As you put your hand in his he looked down, startled, then smiled gravely and gave you a hand a gentle squeeze.

There is no rest of an auction sale in your home now unless you want it or those who follow when you have joined Mother and Dad, decide upon one.

A notice tacked to a telegraph pole caught your eye but yesterday. "Auction Sale" were the words of its heading, and all the familiar reading followed.

LLOYD, GEORGE'S ESCAPE

How Ireland Unintentionally Saved His Life. "One Who Knows Them" has just published a volume of character sketches on the big personages at the Peace Conference.

When in Paris it was necessary for him to speak on the telephone in London, in order to keep in daily touch with events there. He was very annoyed when it became evident that the line was being tapped, but triumphed over the inquisitive listeners—by installing a Welshman at the other end of the telephone and carrying on all his conversations in Welsh.

There is a dramatic and little known incident in Mr. Lloyd George's career. Britain might have had to finish the war without him, for he very nearly went to Russia with Lord Kitchener, and it was only at the last moment (May 25, 1914), that he was detained on Irish matters.

For Deschanel, the late President of the Republic, he had supreme contempt, and he made no attempt to conceal it. When told that Deschanel came to fall from the train because he was leaning out of the window and over-balanced himself, Clemenceau exclaimed: "That is impossible, his head is too light."

There is an amusing story of a conference Briand had, when Prime Minister, with Mr. Asquith, at the beginning of the war. The two of his colleagues travelled by night from Paris to London, and Briand, instead of sleeping, insisted upon telling stories and anecdotes during the whole of the journey.

Intimate glimpses of the King and the Prince of Wales abound in the reminiscences of Ernest Brooks, O.B.E., the royal photographer, in the September Strand. Brooks was born on the royal estate at Windsor and his first position was as trainer of the mule that Kitchener brought from India to the Coronation procession in 1884.

Brought up in the same village with the royal family, Brooks never had any undue fear of funkeys or their superiors. "Why do you come so often to the palace?" he asked at Queen Victoria's coronation. "Because I want to get your Majesty," replied the young man. "Go ahead," said the King, and the result was a photograph still treasured by Queen Alexandra as the best of her last days.

Brooks, once in the army, was the Duke of Connaught and India with King George, getting a remarkable photograph of the present monarch shooting a tiger, but the tours of the Prince of Wales were the jolliest of all. He tells that the prince had a private jazz band aboard the train, with Admiral Halsey performing on the tin whistle and the prince acting as head drummer.

The following item clipped from a Moncton paper has this to say of one of Deseronto's popular young men: "One of the bright spots on the U. N. An Ancient Farmer. An extraordinary instance of longevity is that concerning an agriculturist named Thomas Parr, born in Shropshire, England, in 1483. He was engaged in agricultural pursuits and worked in the field till after his 130 birthday. At 120 he married a second time and had the responsibility of another family, his wife presenting him with offspring. At 152 he was introduced to the court of Charles I. by the Earl of Arundel, a remarkable prodigy, but the change of air and new mode of living caused his death. A post-mortem examination of his body was made, but no internal symptoms of decay could be discovered. A grandson of Thomas Parr died in Shropshire at the age of 120.—London Answers.

DRAIN THE HILLSIDES

Erosions Mean Considerable Loss to Many Farms.

Tilling, Open Ditching and Terracing Recommended—How to Plan and Do the Work—Why an Orchard Will Pay.

The erosion of hillsides and the flooding of the land below by the eroded material has long been a worry and an economical loss to many farmers in hilly and mountainous sections. This can frequently be prevented, and the method employed depends on the conditions existing, such as the nature of the soil; light or heavy, the steepness of the slope, and the type of agriculture practiced; pasture or tilled crops.

The Value of "Sheep-Drains." Wet hillsides used as sheep pastures may be much improved by what are sometimes called "sheep-drains." These are merely shallow open ditches about 30 inches wide, and 9 inches deep on the bottom, and 15 inches deep for removing the surface water. They are dug slantingly around the slope to intercept the flowing water and carry it in a definite channel to a suitable outlet at the base of the hill. The removed earth should be thrown out on the lower side to form a sort of embankment to the drain. The grade of the ditch should not be so steep as to give the water sufficient force to destroy the drain by either washing away the banks or digging the drain itself deeper, and thus making it dangerous for the sheep and lambs. Sub-drains are sometimes necessary.

Terracing and Draining. A system of terracing is quite universally used to prevent destructive erosion on hillsides. The terraces are made perfectly level, and of any width, and then carefully seeded to grass. At the time of rain the water spreads out evenly over the surface of these and then flows gently over the slope below without sufficient force to wash away any portion of the hill and thus prevents "gullying."

Why an Orchard Will Pay. The planting of commercial apple orchards in the Province of Ontario is highly desirable for several reasons: 1. Ontario is not producing enough good apples for home supply, but imports annually from Nova Scotia, British Columbia, Oregon and California.

Advantage of Tile Draining. If tile drains are so laid to intercept this seepage water, considerable erosion can be prevented. If the hillsides are comparatively steep, drains laid at an angle to the incline will be more satisfactory. They will naturally intercept all of the water flowing through the soil above them. Also the grade will be less affected by the water moving slowly through them. If the slope is not very steep the drains may be laid down the incline with satisfactory results. Here the tile drains the land on both sides and no double draining results.

Made A Good Record. The following item clipped from a Moncton paper has this to say of one of Deseronto's popular young men: "One of the bright spots on the U. N. TAKE YEAST THE BEST WAY—WITH IRON

If Weak, Thin or Run-Down Take Ironized Yeast, the Great New Vitamine Tonic Treatment in Tablet Form.

At last the perfect yeast combination has been discovered! No longer will it be necessary for people to put up with all the objectionable features of eating ordinary baking yeast for health. For yeast may now be taken in convenient tablet form, combined with iron, which is necessary in order to get the best benefit from yeast.

This preparation is called Ironized Yeast, and is the approved vitamine tonic treatment for run-down conditions, loss of weight, nervousness, lack of energy, poor appetite, skin eruptions and other run-down symptoms. The reason Ironized Yeast is bringing such splendid results everywhere is because it contains highly concentrated brewer's yeast, which is far richer in vitamins than ordinary baking yeast. Vitamines, as we know, are one of the most essential of all food elements—yet our modern diet is almost entirely lacking in them.

"And Man, How I Did Eat Real Food!"

LOOKING BACK, now, to those vacation days, there's a lively kindling of joy—even in the memory of appetite at camp-fire meals.

Real food—and real hunger! That's the year-around relationship between appetite and Grape-Nuts—that crisp and wholesome gift from the great doo-doors—the perfected goodness of Nature's best food grains.

There's a flavor and charm to Grape-Nuts that appeal to the appetite like the tang of the summer camp, and there's a scientific balance of nutrition and a readiness of digestion that make Grape-Nuts a wonderful aid to health and vigor.

"Real food" is the verdict of enthusiastic thousands who find a daily delight in the unique sweetness and crispness of Grape-Nuts, and who "carry on" splendidly with its body-building nourishment.

Let the zest of appetite be a companion of your indoor meals, too. Grape-Nuts is sold and served wherever good food is sold and served.
