Keeping Up-to-date

There are styles in Eye Glasses and Spectacles as well as in other articles of personal use and adornment. Just at present both Eye Glasses and Spectacles run to the large-sized lenses. Large lenses afford a better protection to the eyes, as well as giving a greater range of vision. Shell frames with gold-filled mountings are quite the "vogue." They are especially suitable for out-of-door sports, but are just as useful for indoor use. If you wish to keep up-to-date, let us fit you with a pair of the latest thing in optical ware.

PUBLIC OPINION IN COMMUNITY DISPUTES

An Address Given by Rev. D. M. Solandt to the Canadian Club.

The members of the Canadian Club were given a rare treat in the address made by Rev. D. M. Solandt, Toronto, at the dinner held at the British American hotel on Wednesday evening. The speaker is a graduate of Queen's University, and for the last two years has been deputy chairman of the council of industry which was formed in Winnipeg during the strike period of 1919.

The subject of the address was "Civilizing of Public Opinion in Community Disputes," the speaker opening with a reference, half humorous, to the wonderful spirit of the west. In this country of the west, and especially in the city of Winnipeg, an endeavor has been earnestly made by legislation and arbitration to settle many problems of the community which arise and may often be dealt with to a certain extent, by an open discussion between the parties concerned. The Industrial Disputes Act was passed by the Manitoba government, giving powers to the council, which was formed to investigate all these matters as they arose. In Winnipeg, socialists are rather prominent at times, and their insidious work has often aggravated more innocent people to ill-advised action. But the public has a right to be informed as to the measures taken which concern them, so the new council sought to raise the ideal of the community as the thing with which we were all concerned, and try and bring about conditions whereby all citizens might be happy and safe. One of the main principles worked out was that no citizen should charge an undue amount for his services to the community, while labor must give a full day's work in a full day's time.

The speaker read extracts from the act, explained the working of some of the principles laid down therein, and illustrated his remarks by showing examples of how many problems had been dealt with in Winnipeg. Disputes between the O. B. U. and some of the members; the problem of high rent; the price of wholesale fruit; the decrease in the amount of work done by the brick-layers; and many others were taken up with and settled to the mutual satisfaction of those concerned. A dispute arose between the jewelers and their employers—the council investigated into the whole matter, and finally recommended that lectures should be given in the technical schools to apprentices, by the most expert men in the trade, this was done, and the employers entered heartily into the scheme and allowed their men time off for this purpose.

The act requires that the council shall delve into all these questions, which, to a great extent, have to do with the education and recreation of the people. It is a most comprehensive thing, and endeavors to bring a greater happiness to the people of all classes. The result has shown that both parties to a dispute of this kind are ready and willing to lay their troubles before the council, discuss with them a probable solution, and will generally abide by their decision. One party is just as decent in their ideas as the other, both are striving for a fair agreement; but the ideal must be kept before them constantly that this country must be made decent and safe to conduct business in.

In conclusion, Mr. Solandt expressed the feeling that the community had derived a great benefit from the work of the council, and told of an incident which had come to his attention in the black days of a certain stage of the war. A large number of Canadian soldiers had gathered together just back of the line to hear a certain man address them. Rather at a loss as to just how to approach them, and to strike the right chord, he remarked that he had a picture with him of the greatest thing in the world, what they cherished most, and what they were fighting for, to keep clean and decent, and in a dramatic pause, he unfolded a small map of Canada. As one voice the soldiers cheered him for a full ten minutes, as memories rushed back to them of their homes and dear ones. And this is what we must also keep before us in our life in the community, the ideal of living, not for ourselves alone, but for our city and our country, as true Canadian citizens.

A hearty vote of thanks to the speaker of the evening was moved by Rev. Dr. Jordan, who referred to the number of ministers engaged in work outside of their profession, but who had peculiar abilities due to their ministerial training. Major-General Sir A. C. Macdonell, in seconding, remarked, humorously, that he would probably be accused of backing a man from the west, but he was sure that he could give no better man. The vote was given heartily by the members, who appreciated the splendid and instructive address, and the gathering broke up, after the singing of the national anthem.

Find Employment For Returned Men

In his nomination address J. M. Campbell said: "The returned soldiers must have everything to the limit of the financial strength of the country. We want ability shown in reconstruction, in finding employment for the men, and it is unfortunate that the Meighen Government has done nothing."
