What the Editor Hears

That the Women's Aid association of the Kingston General Hospital is receiving great credit for their excellent work in putting the basement and attic in good condition and replenishing the linen cupboard.

That James K. Haekett, the actor who has many friends in Kingston, is prolonging his stay in Europe. He has been invited to play in Athens, in Spain and in Berlin, but has refused the latter invitation.

That again the waistline will blossom with flowers. Perhaps an entire garland forming a girle or just the old-time ever-loved nosegay. A touch of black in with the flowers gives the little French finish.

That a famous woman artist said in Washington that while Marshal Foch's face contains every element of the soldier, the man of courage and of great mental calibre, it was the most spirituelle masculine face she had ever seen.

That Lady Byng speaking to the Women's Press Club in Toronto, deprecated the fact that a number of women who could afford to live at home took men's jobs during the war and are still keeping them.

That a touch of red on a black frock or hat, is the last word in smartness.

PLANNING CHILD'S WINTER CLOTHES

Paris Frocks its Wee Citizens in Novel Styles. Although colder weather brings another consideration into dressing the kiddies, many mothers find it possible to keep them in wash clothes throughout the year, relying on underwear and top coats for warmth.

There is a great deal to commend this practice in communities where steam heat is the accepted thing. Sweaters have become so popular in the nursery that nearly every child's wardrobe contains one or a dozen as circumstances may permit, and these, of course, help solve the problem of keeping the child comfortable in an inadequately heated home.

What Paris has to say on the always pertinent subject of juvenile fashions, may be an inspiration in planning the youngster's school and playthings. Paris reports that the cult of the original and the novelty effect is more than ever apparent in children's wear at the present moment.

The last-named styles follow quite a distinct trend in the silhouette, being absolutely straight. There are no sleeves set into the corsage, even in the simple frocks. It is the shroud which is developed into a sort of sleeve by a prolonged treatment, descending a little way over the upper part of the arm.

The waist is barely indicated by a belt in self material. This belt is narrower in the more elaborate frocks. Sometimes the straight corset comes down over the skirt, entirely minus a belt.

The fabrics in vogue for children's frocks are much the same as those worn by the grown-up sisters. Tusser, Shantung, voile, plain or embroidered organdie, georgette, crepe, rayon, very soft Hattian and fine serge and poplin in the more practical styles, share in popularity. Cerise, jade green, and baby chick yellow are the leading colors.

There are very few coats, but a great many capes, even for the babies of two years old. The capes are developed in such materials as buravella, in diallaine, popeline and biege shades.

The juvenile hats are most often little bonnet styles molding the head, with off-the-face effects. They are nearly always in the same material as the frock and also the same color.

For more formal wear are seen some of the "cabriolet" 1830 styles, adorned with flat roses, and tying with long streamers of taffeta.

What may be true of the little garments for the Paris kiddies, may safely be said to be true on this side of the water. The little bellies and beaus of tomorrow being as smartly gowned as their French sisters, may be seen in the way latest styles of Paris design, if not of Paris manufacture, for their small clothes have assumed an air of importance to be reckoned with.

Johnny Cake. Will you kindly give me a recipe for making Johnny Cake? Mrs. E. R.

Ans: One egg well beaten, a pinch of salt, one tablespoon sugar, one teaspoon soda, two cups butter-milk, two cups cornmeal, one cup flour. Last of all beat two teaspoons dripping.

A Good Thing To Do. It's a good thing to scatter sunshine, it's the best way we know, it's a good thing to make hearts happy. To bring gladness where we go.

HOW TO MAKE MONEY.

Many women are averse to making pin money. It doesn't matter whether they need it or not. There is special pleasure in spending money one has made through one's own initiative and resources.

Women who are artistically inclined, who possess originality and versatility and who have had enough training to know a good design when they see one, may make a comfortable living for themselves by designing.

There is a call for good work and new ideas among the manufacturers of carpets, oil-clothes, and, in fact, among all manufacturers who put out figured goods of every description. How shall the worker find her market? By studying the advertising pages of trade journals, where such manufacturers usually place their advertisements.

There is a woman in England who is known as a designer of artistic furniture and another who is making a success as a designer of costumes for light opera—a field hitherto held entirely by men.

To-morrow's HOROSCOPE

By Genevieve Kemble. FRIDAY, DEC. 2. According to this day's sidereal movement, the greatest good may be accomplished by remaining very quiet and proceeding with affairs along the most conservative lines.

Initiative or new ventures are not encouraged, as menacing conditions threaten. Speculation or extravagant outlay of any kind is not encouraged, as certain adverse figures presage loss. Rash and quarrelsome tendencies should be curbed and litigation shunned.

Those whose birthday it is have the forecast of a disastrous year unless they give quiet and close application to business, avoiding speculation and all money loss. They should refrain from quarrels and litigation. A child born on this day may be disposed to be rash, careless and untruthful unless it is taught early in life the necessity for integrity, industry and thrift.

Don't forget to try a little classified advertisement. A Pretty Lamp Shade. A beautiful lampshade, simple of construction, can be made by any woman who enjoys making lovely things for the home.

The wire frame is properly covered with soft, old gold silk—three thicknesses of the thin China silk is sufficient. To give a particularly soft and rosy light make the middle thickness of rose colored silk. The shade will then give an old gold appearance but the light will be slightly modified by the layer of rose colored silk.

COLORS FOR PRACTICAL USE

Browns and Grays are Next to Black and Navy in Point of Durability. Browns and grays worn a great deal at this time, are next to black and navy in point of durability, but one wears of brown and it is so extremely difficult to get out of it, if originally every detail of the costume has been matched up.

A brown hat is not effective with anything but a brown costume, although a gray hat, recent experience has shown, is effective with practically everything not excepting brown.

Black hats are, of course, the great economy, for there is no time nor place nor costume for which it is in bad taste, while a navy hat has a much more restricted sphere.

If women with a minimum amount of money for their clothes budget would consider the occasion and the various color combinations which may result from one's wardrobe, they would get a great deal more out of their clothes than they do. It is very nice, of course, to have hats to match up with one's dresses, and all accessories in keeping, but it is less costly to select things that may be juggled around and worn with everything without fear of inharmony.

THE CHILD'S SEPARATE SKIRT

Lightweight Serge, Plaited All Around, is Regarded as Particularly Smart. Among the generous range of play and utility frocks for children shown this season the outfit featuring separate skirt and blouse is a general favorite.

A particularly smart little separate skirt for general wear is a fine lightweight serge, the skirt plaited all around, and attached to a clever suspender arrangement which holds it comfortably to the figure. The suspenders or straps of self fabric are fastened on each side at the front with a metal buckle, and this bodice or suspender arrangement is fashioned in the front in vest shape, something like an apron bib. At the back only straps or bands appear.

This skirt holds many suggestions for the woman who makes little daughter's clothes.

Our young lady friend says that she is glad that it was Admiral Beatty and not Marshal Foch that visited the Capital, as she isn't sure that the general public knows the words of the Mayonnaise.

The price of African waxes has increased from $5 to $6 and an extra classy one costs $6.50. Five out of every ten women in Great Britain are smokers.

Long Cascade Touching the Floor.

In long skirts after their enjoyment of short models these several years, but femininity is yielding and the costume designers are winning out, as they usually do. The French and British women were first to resist, but the French modistes have been sending their representatives to the races in longer skirts, and women wishing to follow close to the "mode" have capitulated. The shortest skirts seen nowadays are in bridal costumes.

Among the wealthy families in China it is improper for widows to remarry. Madison, N. J., is to have an exclusive golf course for women.
