THE BROWN SPOT ON THE BEDTICK

Al Jennings, One-Time Bandit, Train Robber, Tells Us a Story of His Early Days.

"It was near nightfall of a cold, dreary day in late fall. A steady rain was falling. The keen wind drove it like bits of steel into our faces as Zona and I rode along. Zona was one of the coolest, most daring 'two-gun' men I ever knew. We had just pulled off a robbery together and were dodging the law through the foothills of Oklahoma."

"The gray day was turning black," continued Mr. Jennings, "and I saw myself once more in his rough outfit, his guns ready. The road was a mass of sticky mud. We were chilled, tired, hungry. Our one idea was to find some sort of shelter for the night."

"I know a place," I said, "where there's a little deserted cabin, out of the way. There's some old Indian graves near it, and people sort of keep away. Let's make for it."

"The old cabin had the dank, chilling air of places long deserted. It was dirty, decaying. Inside there was a fireplace, a few broken pieces of furniture, and in one corner an old bedtick."

"While I made a fire with the last of the furniture, Zona went out and dug up some scrawny sweet potatoes that we had noticed near by as we came to the cabin. We cooked them in the fireplace. That was our supper."

"I was all in. I went over to look at the bedtick, to see what sort of bed it would make. There was a big, dark brown stain in the middle of it. I knew a bloodstain when I saw it. I went back to the fire."

ONE REEL YARNS

WHAT KILLED THE CAT?

"What's in that box, Uncle Horace?" Marilyn asked. She stared at the curious, foreign-looking carved box on his table.

"Don't be so curious," he smiled. "I've shown you all my curios. I'd rather you didn't look in this one." And he went on with his writing.

"Next day Marilyn stopped in her uncle's room to look at the box again. "You must think I'm a baby," she said. "That box won't let me see everything he has. It can't be anything dangerous or he wouldn't have it locked like that. You'd think it had a snake in it, or something. Anyway, he'd never know that I opened it."

BISHOP FALLON'S ADDRESS

In my possession a letter from a living Minister of Education in this province saying there is absolutely no question at all about the rights of Catholics to establish schools of what is now called secondary education whenever they feel prepared to do so. They were not prevented in 1871, fifty years ago. Catholic people then were not prepared to push forward their secondary schools. But from 1863 down to 1871 certain schools were doing secondary school work in our separate common school system, which was confirmed to the Catholics of Ontario by Act of 1867.

Separate Common School. "In 1871, the legislature cut in two parts the public common school system, but did not thereby take from the separate common school, any rights they had hitherto enjoyed; because that would have been against the constitution. At the present time, we are in a position to develop our secondary classes, not only in a position to develop them, but in many places have developed them."

"Second: there is a class of school in Ontario called continuation schools or a better name would be rural high schools. When the Continuation Schools Act passed the legislature, it gave to both the public and separate common school systems the right to have these schools, but the intention was rather nullified by regulations from the Department of Education with regard to this class of school for the separate school system, so that rural parishes containing 30, 40 or 60 children are prohibited by the educational regulations of Ontario from establishing the fifth or sixth form of continuation classes, so that a Catholic man struggling to provide for his family on a farm but still with that desire to provide for his children a higher education than he was enabled to procure, is compelled to send his son or daughter many miles away to some high school or college and bear the added expense as the price of his laudable ambition. What we ask is that the original intention should be carried out, and that continuation classes should be given the necessary legal machinery to operate them on behalf of the Roman Catholic rural communities."

Share of Taxes. The second point in his address emphasized strongly in his address was "the failure of the government to give us, in view of the schools we are conducting, up to the fourth form, our proper share of taxes and school grants."

"He said: 'The Act of 1863 gave to every supporter of the separate common school system the right to direct all his taxes to the support of that system and prohibited the law for the support of the other system or of another system.'"

"In 1867, there was little business done in the form of corporations, stock companies or limited liability companies, and so, thoughtlessly, without the least ill-will or evil design, parliament did not provide for the contingency which has arisen, viz.: the immense business in corporations and public utilities. That is the law. On the face of it, it looks fair, but it isn't operative. For instance, you have in Kingston large national banks, which have branches from the Atlantic to the Pacific. Who is going to determine the religious persuasion of the stockholders, scattered all over Canada, the United States and Europe? There is no record kept of the religious affiliations of holders of stock, which, moreover, changes hands from day to day in the stock markets of the world."

"Or, in comes a street railway which seeks a franchise and you have your share in the granting of it the same as non-Catholics but when that public corporation undertakes to pay its taxes, all the taxes goes to the public common school system, not a red cent to the separate common school system; your property rights and your privileges as a Canadian citizen are disregarded."

"We have now in the arms of each one of us in Canada, in the arms of every man and woman in the Dominion, a beautiful big baby in the shape of about 23,000 miles of railways; a lovely bundle of national debt. And you will grow old and die and still those who come after you will be carrying this strong and healthy baby. Now, the Catholic population of Canada constitutes about 41 per cent. or 42 per cent. of the total population of the country, hence the Catholic people own about 41 per cent. of the national railways and therefore about 41 per cent. of the taxes on these railways should go to the separate common school system. But the Catholic people of Ontario do not receive a single cent of the taxes on property of which they are 41 per cent. owners. Now, what do you think of it? We don't want a single cent of taxes that doesn't belong to us, but we claim that we should receive the taxes on our own property or percentage on the national debt."

There were three propositions advanced by His Lordship by which the existing conditions in this regard might be remedied. One was: taxation to assessment in proportion to population; the second taxation in proportion to assessment; and the third: taxation in proportion to the number of children attending school."

ECZEMA On Face and Head FOR FIVE YEARS

Eczeema or salt rheum, as it is so often called, manifests itself in little round pimples which contain an extremely irritating fluid. These break and subsequently a crust is formed and the intense burning, itching and smarting, especially at night or when the part is exposed to a strong heat, is almost unbearable and relief is gladly welcomed.

There is only one way to get relief and no remedy like BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS. Take it internally and it acts at the seat of the disease in the blood and drives it out of the system.

Apply it externally and it takes out the itching, stinging and burning, and promotes healthy healing. Mr. J. Sage, 215 Princess Ave., Vancouver, B. C., writes:—"Having suffered with eczeema on the face and head, for the last five years, I consulted several doctors, and tried various kinds of ointments and lotions, but I derived no benefit from any of them. I did not know what to do until a friend advised me to try Burdock Blood Bitters, and after I had used two bottles I began to get better and now after taking eight bottles I have not even a blotch on me. I feel that I cannot praise B. B. too highly. I hope you will make full use of this recommendation for the benefit of those who are suffering from this terrible complaint, eczeema." B. To Relieve Catarrh, Catarrhal Deafness And Head Noises

Persons suffering from catarrhal deafness, or who are growing hard of hearing and have head noises will be glad to know that this distressing affliction can usually be successfully treated at home by an internal medicine that in many instances has effected complete relief after other treatments have failed. Sufferers who could scarcely hear have had their hearing restored to such an extent that the tick of a watch was plainly audible seven or eight inches away from either ear. Therefore, if you know of someone who is troubled with head noises or catarrhal deafness, cut out this formula and hand it to them as a favor to a poor sufferer perhaps from total deafness. The prescription can be prepared at home and is made as follows:

Secure from your druggist 1 oz. Parmit (Doubt Strength). Take this home and add to it 1/2 pint of hot water and a little granulated sugar; stir until dissolved. Take one tablespoonful four times a day. Parmit is used in this way not only to reduce by tonic action the inflammation and swelling in the Eustachian Tubes, and thus to equalize the air pressure on the drum, but to correct any excess of secretions in the middle ear, and the results it gives are nearly always quick and effective.

Every person who has catarrh in any form, or distressing rumbling, hissing sounds in their ears, should give this recipe a trial.—Advt.

school; the last, in his opinion, being the fair and just method. "that your child, the Catholic child, may be considered as a citizen of this province just the same as the child of your Protestant neighbor, so that, if a total of 10,000 children were attending school in the city of Kingston, and 1,000 of these children were Catholic, therefore, one-tenth of the corporation and public utility taxes of the city of Kingston would go to the upkeep of the separate common school system and nine-tenths to the upkeep of the public common school system."
