AMHERST ISLAND DEATHS

The Late Mrs. R. Burleigh and Capt. Hugh Glen.

Stella, Dec. 12.—The death took place in the Kingston General hospital on Thursday evening, Dec. 1st, of an old and respected resident of the island in the person of Mrs. R. Burleigh at the age of seventy-seven years. The late Mrs. Burleigh's husband predeceased her some years ago. The funeral which was quite largely attended, was held on Saturday afternoon to Pentlithion cemetery and was conducted by Rev. W. McCrea. The pallbearers were: Hugh Filson, Robert Filson, R. J. Marshall, John Marshall, F. P. Instant, James Strain. One sister, Mrs. John Marshall, survives. Among friends from a distance were Miss S. Burleigh, Buffalo, N.Y.; John Marshall, Ottawa; Mr. and Mrs. F. P. Instant, Adolphustown.

The death took place on Tuesday morning, Dec. 6th of another aged and respected resident of the island in the person of Capt. Hugh Glenn, at the advanced age of eighty-four years. The late Capt. Glenn was born in Ireland and after coming to this country, followed the life of a sailor on the upper lakes. Of late years he had been following the occupation of farming. Deceased is survived by his wife and two sons, William and Clifford Glenn at home. The largely attended funeral was held on Wednesday to Glenwood cemetery and was conducted by the Rev. W. McCrea. The pallbearers were:

The next great Tory Chancellor, Eldon, rose from equally obscure beginnings. His father was a collier, at Newcastle, Bethell Lord Westbury, was the son of a doctor in the small country town of Bridgewater. Bethell's first important case was on in which he appeared for Brasenose College, Oxford, and he received the brief because, years before, the Provost of the College had heard him in an examination, translate an Ode of Pindar, with fluency and skill. Bethell won the case and made a reputation by it. Lord Palmerston made Bethell a Law Officer, and, finally, Lord Chancellor in succession to Lord Campbell.

Anaemia

Thin, watery blood is no more nourishing than thin, watery milk—skim milk.

But you can soon enrich thin blood, overcome the anaemic condition and build up the whole system by using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

Mrs. F. G. Simmons, 42 Curtis St., Brantford, Ont., writes:

"For about eight years I suffered from anaemia. My circulation was poor, my gums and lips were pale, and my hands and feet were always cold. I was nervous and unable to sleep well. I had frequent headaches, seemed restless and easily worried or irritated. There was a buzzing sound in my ears. Indigestion was also one of my complaints, and I often was attacked by weak spells. I went to a doctor, who told me I was anaemic, but as I did not get any better I decided to try Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and after the first box I felt brighter and my headaches completely disappeared. I continued using the Nerve Food for quite a while. I am quite well now, and cheerfully and gratefully recommend Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to people suffering as I did before I used this splendid medicine."

QUEEN WAS SHOCKED.

Dull Mid-Victorians Enjoyed Exciting Moments After All. Some stories of the dull mid-Victorians are told in a new book, "Mayfair and Montmartre."

Hearing the band of the Royal Horse Guards playing on the terrace at Windsor on one occasion, Queen Victoria was so pleased with a certain tune that she asked an official to find out its name.

"After some hesitation the official replied: 'Come Where the Boose is Cheaper.' This was a musical idiom sung by Mr. Charles Coburn, the comedian.

A curious story is told about Queen Victoria regarding the construction of the Admiralty buildings. Summoned to Windsor to show the Queen his drawings, the architect took with him by mistake those for an asylum, the designs for which he was planning at the same time.

This was discovered only when her majesty had expressed herself pleased with the plans. As she approved of the design, nothing more was to be done, and the Admiralty, as it stands to-day, was constructed on the plans made for the asylum.

A story is told of a baronet whose hostess said she heard he liked a glass of wine.

"Madam, was his reply, 'those who told you that did me an injustice—they should have said a bottle.'

"When I was a young man," Lord Palmerston used to say, "the Duke with me for half-past seven in the morning; and I was asked, 'Why, Lord Palmerston, how will you contrive to keep that engagement?'"

"Oh," I said, "of course, the easiest thing in the world; I shall keep it the last thing before I go to bed."

The remark of a friend of his mistress, who had remonstrated with him on his extravagant use of eggs, shows what faddists were the Victorians in the matter of food.

"The first egg was all right, madam," he said, "but I had to go through a couple of dozen or so before I got others to match its color for the sauce."

Rose to Woolsock

It has been said that in England every newly-called barrister carries the Woolsock in his brief-bag; for example has shown that the great office of Lord High Chancellor may be attained by men of the humblest beginnings. Thurlow, one of George III's Chancellors, of whom it was said that no one could be so wise as he looked, was the son of a saddler in Thetford; and he owed his first brief to a chance conversation in a coffee-house that was overheard by a solicitor. The solicitor heard the young barrister maintain his position with such force and lucidity that he briefed him to appear in the House of Lords; and from that time fortune smiled on the Thetford tradesman's son.

The next great Tory Chancellor, Eldon, rose from equally obscure beginnings. His father was a collier, at Newcastle, Bethell Lord Westbury, was the son of a doctor in the small country town of Bridgewater. Bethell's first important case was on in which he appeared for Brasenose College, Oxford, and he received the brief because, years before, the Provost of the College had heard him in an examination, translate an Ode of Pindar, with fluency and skill. Bethell won the case and made a reputation by it. Lord Palmerston made Bethell a Law Officer, and, finally, Lord Chancellor in succession to Lord Campbell.

Improving British Docks.

Everybody will have heard the story of the American who was contemptuously comparing the Clyde with the Mississippi, and who was silenced by the observation that while Providence had been responsible for the Mississippi, human engineers had made the Clyde. It is a literal fact that the famous home of shipbuilding and sea commerce is largely an artificial waterway. Still, the work of improvement, begun nearly a hundred years ago, is being continued. New docks are about to be constructed which will give six large parallel basins with direct entrance from the river, and will add about seven miles of quays to the accommodation of the port. The total cost of the new works will be about $10,000,000.

Ambitious developments are also proceeding at the port of London. A new cargo quay, 1,000 feet long, has just been put into service, and plans for a large passenger stage at Tilbury and for big extensions to dock accommodation are being prepared.

World's Deepest Gold Mine.

Australia is said to possess the deepest gold mine in the world. It is situated at Bendigo, Victoria, and is known as the New Chum Railway Mine. The miners who work in it are obliged to travel down a shaft nearly three-quarters of a mile deep. The heat in the mine is terrific, the temperature of 168 degrees being so weakening that it is necessary to spray the bodies of the miners continually with cold water from above ground.

Away from the spray the men could not stand, and it is as much as they can do to work moderately under the spray. Few will begrudge these men the money they earn.

Nine Million Customers to Buy Your Products

And the Newspapers to Reach Them Every Day. Link Up the Factors of Success!

The retail business of six staple trades alone in Canada is conducted daily by 34,208 stores, which are the accepted and logical outlet through which food products and manufactured articles are passed on to the ultimate consumer—and the money received in the transaction is returned into circulation. These trades include:

- 13,331 Grocery Stores
In these stores thousands or tons of foodstuffs reach the family table, being sold in well-known branded or trade-marked cartons, packages, containers and bottles, made familiar by DAILY NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING.
- 2,645 Clothing Stores
Through these establishments the men and boys of Canada are supplied with outer garments, ties, hosiery, gloves and underwear. Stock is turned over, and shops prosper in proportion to the demand created for the wares they display. DAILY NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING creates and stimulates demand.
- 3,050 Boot and Shoe Stores
They turn over millions of pairs of boots and shoes, rubbers and accessories in addition to those sold in department stores. Good-will is one of their great assets, because foot comfort and honest quality in footwear are absolute demands. The DAILY NEWSPAPER best carries your guarantee.
- 1,685 Furniture Stores
It is estimated that at least 160,000 new houses are needed in Canada. The furniture sellers who are best known will add this business to that which they already enjoy. The DAILY NEWSPAPER makes them known quickly and cheaply.
- 2,537 Dry Goods Stores
Where the women of the family do the bulk of their shopping their stocks are replenished absolutely at the demand of the householder in their trading area. Women regard advertisements as part of the day's news.
- 2,955 Hardware Stores
Not only farm implements and the staples of hardware, but many articles of domestic utility and convenience are circulated through these establishments. Special local tastes are often a problem unless the help of the local daily paper is enlisted on your side.

The successful manufacturer and distributor extends his business by linking it, through DAILY NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING, with these 35,000 merchants or any territorial division of them.
