Principal and Mrs. Bruce Taylor entertained at supper after the special convocation and unveiling of the tablet in Grant Hall on Wednesday evening, when their guests had the honor of being presented to His Excellency, Lord Byng, who was the guest of honor. Principal and Mrs. Taylor received the delay with a handsome gown of black with black and white sequins. Lord Byng was much interested in the university and said he thoroughly enjoyed the college yells. Lovely yellow chrysanthemums, Queen's flowers, were about the charming room with its bright fire, and on the supper table where Mrs. W. F. Nickle poured coffee and Mrs. Hugh C. Nickle cut the fies. Among those present were General Sir Archibald and Lady Macdonell, Miss Alison Macdonell, the Bishop of Ontario and Mrs. E. J. Bidwell, General King and Mrs. W. B. Shuttleworth King, Dr. D. M. Gordon, the Dean of Ontario, General A. E. Ross, Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Nickle, Col. and Mrs. Alexander Macphail, Dr. Watson, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh C. Nickle, Mr. and Mrs. F. A. On Wednesday afternoon the children of the Orphans' Home had a visit from the Anglican Girls' Club of Queen's, that has for one of its objects the welfare of people little or big, that are the better for a helping hand. This time the season of Christmas being close at hand, the girls came laden with candies, apples and oranges for each of the fifty children who have a happy home under Miss Mackenzie's kindly care. After everyone had had all the sweets, etc., they could possibly eat, some of the girls played popular music and the boys and girls recited and sang for their guests. Then the company divided and both large rooms were filled with merry laughter as the entire party played games for half an hour or so. Then one of the girls played "White Shepherds Watched Their Flocks by Night," and the children's voices joined in the sweet old carol. Three cheers and a tiger for their visitors and many good wishes for a Merry Christmas brought this happy little party to an end.

HOW TO MAKE MONEY.

Few women are averse to making pin money. It doesn't matter whether they do it or not. There is special pleasure in spending money one has made through one's own initiative and resources. Each day there will appear on this page one of a series of suggestions on making money. Each article will give women readers of The Whig an idea that may be turned into a moneymaker.

No. 50—A Lunch Room For Business People.

A business opportunity which an enterprising woman could very well combine with her regular household duties can be found by serving lunches to employees in an uptown section of the city which is largely given over to business. It is not unusual in these times to see a sign something like the following, tacked up on the front porch of a dwelling house which happens to be located in such a section of a city: Lunches Served. Hot or Cold. Tea, Coffee or Chocolate. 20c, 30c, 25c.

Looking about in such a locality, you will probably find grocery stores, candy shops, florist establishments, real estate offices, etc., but no restaurants. The employees of these places are doubtless glad of an opportunity to purchase a wholesome meal, though necessarily plain, meal in the middle of the day, at a moderate price. The experiment has been tried in a number of cases with pronounced success.

What the Editor Hears

That the turkey is a haughty bird, who greatly over values his own importance as "among those present," at the Christmas dinner.

That Miss Agnes McPhail, M.P., speaking at sessions of the U.F.W.O. being held in Toronto, said she would knit a pair of socks for Mr. Cramer while she was learning the ways of governing to help keep her woman's tongue still while she is still a novice.

That to have sold every thing saleable of the scanty household furniture and at last to have parted with her wedding ring is the experience of a young Kingston mother of two little children, whose husband has had no regular employment for some time.

That the red and yellow poppies and scarlet poinsettias seen in the shops are triumphs of imitative art and are truly decorative.

That a Toronto girl who has come to make her home in Kingston says she sees more thorough-bred dogs and girls with ruddy cheeks, on the streets of Kingston than in any other town of its size she has visited.

That the tiny jointed celaloid dolls seen in the shops this year are the foundation of many pretty Christmas gifts.

That in an evening bag of heavy satin drawing type with a solid bottom, either a bouquet of violets or nasturtiums is being displayed.

That the figure of Santa Claus in the shop windows are gazed at expectantly by many small people who already hear in imagination the jingle of his bells on Christmas morning. The Kiwanis and Rotary Clubs will, in their kindhearted way, endeavor to make these dreams come true for some little ones who otherwise would be sadly disappointed.

Girl Guides' Committee. The regular monthly meeting of the local committee of Girl Guides took place in the Guide room at the Kingston Collegiate Institute on Wednesday afternoon, Mrs. I. G. Bogart occupying the chair. Miss Patterson, who has lately come from London, Eng., has been asked to take the position of assistant staff captain and also to fill the vacancy.

To-morrow's HOROSCOPE

By Genevieve Kemble

FRIDAY, DEC. 16TH.

This may prove to be another troublesome day on which varying fortunes prevail. There is a strong prospect of sudden or abrupt change, quite radical in its nature, and this may be manipulated to future success, although the prospect of immediate returns is not to be counted on. It may require patience, ingenuity and hard work to reap the future benefits forecast. This situation may require travelling or change of residence. New projects and large enterprise are involved. The disposition may tend to initiative and boldness.

Those whose birthday it is have the prospect of a year of radical change with opportunity for large and new ventures, with possible change of residence or travel. Moneys should be handled conservatively in these new enterprises, are immediate returns are not indicated. A child born on this day should be bold, aggressive, enterprising and resourceful, but may jeopardize its good fortune by extravagance and carelessness unless thoroughly trained in early life. A little classified advertisement can brighten the gloomiest outlook.

THE CHRISTMAS TREE

OF BRITISH ORIGIN As a contradiction to the story that the Christmas tree is of German origin comes this story. "A pretty legend of the Christmas tree is that associated with St. Winifred, one of the early Christian missionaries. While St. Winifred was engaged in cutting a huge sacred oak, which had been an object of pagan worship, the tree was blasted and uprooted by a whirlwind. Close by was a young fir, which was harmed neither by the whirlwind nor by the crashing oak. Then St. Winifred, so goes the legend, said to the pagans:

"This little tree, a young child of the forest, shall be your holy tree to-night. It is the wood of peace, for your homes are built of it. It is the sign of an endless life, for its leaves are always green. See how it points to heaven! Let this be called the tree of the Christ-Child! Gather about it if not in the woods, but in your homes. There it will shelter no deeds of blood, but only loving gifts and acts of kindness."

St. Winifred's hearers obeyed, and, taking the tree into their homes, decorated it with lights and gifts—and so it has come down through the ages to us."

For a college woman, Miss Marion Eaton, of Old Sudbury, Mass., has taken up an unusual and unique field of endeavor, that of restoring old graveyards.
