Into the Jail at Bombay At Start of Great Career

 Few men have had such strange treatment at the hands of fate as Commissioner Frederick St. George mobile and Casualty Insurance, 429 chiefs of the Salvation Army. He served in turn as assistant commissioner, magistrate, and 35 years' experience. Dr. Elmer J. treasury official, meting out the justice of the British raj over the subject races of India, a man of great authority. But while thus ruling his heart awoke to the spiritual needs of the people, and in 1881 he went to England and urged on the late General Booth the necessity of doing something for India. "Why not do it yourself?" asked General Booth.

He did. He made a great renunciation. He stepped down from the bench. He ceased to be of the ruling class, and only those who know the peculiar social position the British officials hold in India can appreclate the step he took. He returned to India in 1882, and assumed the garb of the lowest caste, to organize Salvation Army work there and to preach the gospel of Jesus Christ. Within a short time, as related, this grandson of an Eas. India Company mogul, this former judge, was inside a prison, despised and rejected by the class to which he formerly belonged. His come-back from this degradation to being honored by the Government with the Kaiser-I-Hind medal is a mighty achievement. When he returned to England in 1891 as international secretary Com- of Brewer's Mills, known as the Barmissioner Booth-Tucker married Gen.
